HAIR SPRAY HIJACK WEAPON?

LONDON (Reuter) Women passengers at London's Heathrow airport had their hair spray aerosol cans confiscated by security police Monday because it is believed the cans can be used as flamethrowers to hijack airplanes.

Airport police collected about 300 cans of hair spray and fly-killer in a surprise security exercise which also brought in troops and armored cars.

An official said it has been demonstrated that the cans can be as lethal as small bombs.

SUMMER MUSIC in Heritage Court is having its problems with non-summer weather, but outdoors in the Provincial Museum precinct or indoors at Christ Church Cathedral Laszlo Gati and the Victoria Symphony draw a host of listeners to the free promenade concerts. They're held three times a week, Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays at 6 and 7:15 p.m.

Turk Intervention Threat for Cyprus

Times News Services

Turkey called on Britain today to join it in intervening in Cyprus and said it would go it alone if the U.K. refused to help.

Heavy fighting was reported in Nicosia again today.

Archbishop Makarios, ousted Cypriot president, is "sound and well" and was seen today by two senior United Nations representatives in the town of Paphos, a UN spokesman announced in New York.

Developments on the island indicate Turkey and Greece once again might be approaching a war over Cyprus as in 1954 and 1967.

In London, Foreign Secretary James Callaghan announced in the Commons today that Makarios has been allowed refuge in the sovereign British base area on the island.

Makarios later left Cyprus for an unknown destination. Some authorities speculate he may be heading for a special session of the United Nations Security Council.

Callaghan also said that Britain has urged the Greek government to recall Greek officers of the National Guard "at the earliest possible moment."

Under the 1960 treaty guaranteeing the independence of Cyprus, the guarantors — Britain, Greece and Turkey — can intervene jointly or unilaterally against any threat to the island's status quo.

The British government may have to decide in the next few hours whether to invoke Article IV of the Treaty of Guarantee and send in the army and the Royal Air Force against the Greek-led military junta.

The decision depends on whether Turkish Prime Minister Bulent Ecevit orders his armed forces into action under the treaty.

Turkey had put all her forces on full alert Monday night, with 61 naval vessels cruising between Greece and Cyprus, army units ready for embarkation as they were in the crisis of 1954 and 1967, and air squadrons only 25 minutes' flying time from the north coast of Cyprus.

Officials in Whitehall Monday night were ordered to say nothing about the contents of the "urgent messages" sent in the foreign secretary's name during the afternoon to the foreign ministers of Greece and Turkey.

Copies were also sent to UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim.

British political sources said it was virtually unthinkable that Britain should get militarily involved in Cyprus on top of her Ulster commitment.

Sources said Britain is anxious to avoid at all cost direct involvement in the crisis and is trying to cool the situation through intensified diplomatic pressure on the Greek and Turkish governments.

Makarios today appealed in a broadcast monitored in Tel Aviv to the superpowers, to all friendly countries and all peaceful people to support the Cypriot nation in its struggle for independence, its sovereignity, its democratic rights and its refusal to submit to the Greek dictatorship."

Speaking in English, he made the appeal over the radio station at Paphos.

Callaghan also told the Commons:

"It appears that the National Guard are at present in control of parts of the island and that fighting continues among the Cypriot population, although the Turkish population is not at present involved."

Makarios, in his broadcast, said, however, loyalist forces were in control of Limassol, the nation's second largest city, where they "have taken charge of the situation and overcome the subversive forces of fascism."

"We will continue to fight against these people and are supported by our friends," Makarios said.

A British foreign office spokesman said Britain still recognizes Makarios as president of Cyprus.

The rebel-held Nicosia radio said today five cabinet ministers were sworn in today as part of a new government for the island.

12-FLOOR FALL THEN A DRINK

VANCOUVER (CP) — A window-cleaner fell 12 storeys Monday from an apartment building, bounced off a parked car, then recuperated with a drink in the apartment manager's suite.

Norm Lawrence, 23, was working on the top floor of the Del Charro Apartments, when a knot in the rope connecting his platform to a pulley came loose.

He hit the roof of a car parked near a door at the side of the building and bounced from there to the ground. His only injuries were a cut on the head and a sore ankle and Lawrence said he believes the sore ankle came in the fall from the roof of the car to the ground.

Eleanor Bolam, manager of the building, said she gave Lawrence a drink and refused to allow him to return to work until today.

"I wanted to go back to work, but she sent me home," Lawrence said. "I felt like a school kid."

As he fell, Lawrence said, he saw he was going to hit pavement and used his feet to push himself away from the side of the building. The parked car now has a dent about four feet long, three feet wide and seven or eight inches deep in the roof, he said.

One of his main concerns now is whether the Insurance Corporation of B.C. will pay for what he estimates as about $300 damage to the car.

"I really can't afford to pay for it myself. I'm just starting out in my business."

Canada In Space Program

OTTAWA (CP) — Expansion of government space policy, including possible participation in the United States shuttle program, was announced today by Science Minister Jeanne Sauve.

The main element of the policy redefinition is improvement of the capacity of Canadian industry to design and build domestic space systems, the minister said in a statement.

That would be achieved by switching research now done by government agencies over to industry, and by farming out new projects to industry.

Canadian space policy has been based largely on communications projects — the Anik satellites, for example.

It now is being expanded to include such projects as the U.S.-based Earth Resources Technology Satellite (ERTS), in which Canada already participates.

Mrs. Sauve said the National Research Council is discussing Canadian involvement in the space shuttle with the U.S. National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA).

The exact form any participation might take has not been settled, she said.

The shuttle is based on a reusable manned launch vehicle and servicing of satellites in orbit.

The government has authorized $1 million to finance studies of the project, but Canadian participation could cost $35 million, depending on the share the government takes, sources said.

NASA and the government also are jointly engaged in the five-year, $56-million development of the Communications Technology Satellite, to be launched in 1975.

'Save Crystal' Lottery Sought

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

A city-run lottery to finance the restoration of the old Crystal Garden building was suggested today by Ald. Sam Bawlf.

He told city aldermen if Vancouver could use that means to try to save its Orpheum Theatre, Victoria could do the same for the Crystal.

By means of a lottery and perhaps a grant from the provincial government toward capital costs, Bawlf said he was "confident" the city could find enough to rejuvenate the building.

The city's public works committee didn't say yea or nay to the suggestion, but meanwhile it accepted Bawlf's suggestion that a special committee be struck to study the whole question of bringing back some shine to the Crystal's lacklustre dereliction.

The committee will be headed by Ald. Mike Young, with Bawlf, Ald. Alf Hood and Ald. Percy Frampton as members. Its first meeting was set for mid-August.

Bawlf said the need for action was prompted by the provincial government's indication that it has no interest in either the Crystal building or the site, despite earlier signs that the government was considering the development of a downtown transit centre there.

While capital costs were important, he said, of more "vital concern" was the question whether the new-style Crystal could be operated without placing a heavy burden on taxpayers.

Bawlf reiterated an earlier proposal that the upper promenade of the building could be an arboretum, while the lower areas could be given over to a variety of "recreationally-oriented commercial uses."

The arboretum, he said, might be operated by the Butchart's Gardens establishment in conjunction with their Central Saanich attraction.

Young agreed no time should be lost in studying the matter, as the Crystal is "an asset that's wasting."

Besides provincial interest in the Crystal in recent months, a few entrepreneurs have been studying commercial development prospects for the building. One of them is believed to be thinking in terms of a dolphin pool attraction.

PAIR ESCAPE SECOND TIME IN TWO DAYS

HOPE (CP) — Police with tracking dogs are searching for Cecil Logan and Gordon Campbell today following their second escape in two days from jail here.

An RCMP spokesman said the pair escaped at 5:30 a.m. using a hacksaw to rip through the bars of the bathroom and cut one of the cell-block windows.

On Monday, the pair were recaptured after an escape Sunday night. It took less than six hours to get them back into custody.

Campbell, 28, was charged with attempted murder after a man arrested on an attempted theft charge last week, shot at but missed an RCMP officer during the arrest.

Logan, 29, was in jail on a conspiracy charge.

Both have also been charged with escaping custody in connection with the Sunday breakout.

Nixon Aides Probed Taxes

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — The House of Representatives Judiciary Committee today released evidence that the White House sought to create tax problems for Democrats and favorable tax treatment for its friends.

In the process, according to a 440-page report, it looked into the confidential tax status of assorted "politically active" movie stars.

The report which drew no final conclusions was the latest installment to be released by the committee of evidence gathered in its closed-door impeachment inquiry.

The report also claimed that John D. Ehrlichman chewed out the chief of the Internal Revenue Service for a "crappy job" in 1972 when a White House-instigated audit failed to turn up any tax cheating by then-Democratic chairman Lawrence O'Brien.

"I wanted them to turn up something and send him (O'Brien) to jail before the election and unfortunately it didn't materialize," Ehrlichman was quoted as saying.

The report included affidavits from two former IRS directors who told the committee about pressures from White House aides to force the tax agency to obey their instructions.

The evidence also disclosed that John Caulfield, a former treasury department and White House aide, regularly obtained confidential IRS information from Vernon Acree, the assistnat commissioner for inspection for IRS.

An affidavit given the committee by Randolph Thrower, a former IRS director, on May 24, 1974, disclosed that Thrower had asked Acree in 1970 "to investigate the possibility of an unlawful disclosure of confidential tax information" to columnist Jack Anderson.

In a related development, former presidential aide Charles Colson told newsmen Monday after appearing for nine hours before the judiciary committee that he believed Nixon did not know "in advance" of the burglary at the office Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist.

'Better Use' For Posters

Liberal and Conservative candidate campaign signs were more useful as material for a carport than for their intended use, the accused told a provincial court judge Monday.

Allan Wilson, 41, of Duncan, explained in Duncan provincial court he took the elections signs during the recent campaign because "I was building a carport and thought they could be put to better use."

His actions had no political overtones, Wilson said.

Judge Lance Heard granted a conditional discharge after six months probation.

Two-Thirds IWA Back on Job

About two-thirds of the 32,000 coast woodworkers are back at work today, easing the province's largest industry back into full productivity.

Some 9,000 members of the International Woodworkers of America — including 400 employees of a Victoria plywood mill — are still off the job, despite wishes of union officials who reached a tentative agreement with the forest industry last week.

Most workers are expected to return to their jobs later this week, but employees of the B.C. Forest Product's plywood division at Gorge Road have voted to stay off the job until the new contract results are known July 31.

Only maintenance staff returned to Sooke Forest Products today. They will be joined by production workers in five days, after equipment breakdowns experienced during the firm's last shift are righted.

A spokesman for the IWA local 1-118 in Victoria reported some 500 employees returned to B.C. Forest Products' sawmill division on Garbally Road today and the 250 employees moved into operation at Victoria Plywood at midnight Monday.

Employees at Butler Bros. at Sooke and Canada Puget Sound Co. workers at Jordan River returned to work at 8 a.m. today.

In Duncan 5,059 members of Local 1-80 voted to return to work Wednesday. Woodworkers agreed at a meeting Monday that it would be "sheer folly" for members to continue to lose wages pending the outcome of the settlement vote.

A union spokesman could not predict if the return-to-work would be hampered by members of a rank-and-file committee centred in Nanaimo that erected pickets Monday around all but one operation in the Duncan area.

"I can't predict what action will be taken, but they'll be responsible for taking wages out of the pockets of workers if they do. The responsibility rests entirely on the shoulders of the rank and file group."

IWA regional president Jack Munro visited the Duncan local Monday afternoon after reports of pickets and said the group has no authority, whatsoever, to speak for union members.

Manitoba Drivers Hit Back

WINNIPEG (CP) — Motorists who are annoyed at the way other people drive in Manitoba now can do more than just mutter or curse.

The provincial government has hired four students for the summer to accept complaints, in writing or by telephone, about drivers.

However, only those complainants who are willing to have their names and addresses recorded will have their complaints registered.

The registered owner of a car that prompted the complaint will receive a letter, telling him a complaint has been filed.

Under the temporary program, acceptable complaints may be about incidents of illegal, unsafe or simply discourteous driving.

The letter will ask the owner to draw the matter to the attention of the person who was driving the car at the time.

Highways Minister Peter Burtniak said the recipient of the letter is welcome to discuss it with the Motor Vehicle Branch.

Burtniak, who announced the program Monday, indicated that no action would be taken beyond the letter or discussion stage.

Dog-Overboard Finds Owner

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

The mystery of how a dog ended up fighting for her life in the middle of the Gulf of Georgia has been solved.

The dog — a friendly four-year-old German Shepherd — was rescued on the eve of the Victoria-Maui race when John Long's Sea Ray was on her way over from Vancouver for the start of the ocean classic.

The crew spotted her, picked her up, dried her out and took her to Cranston's Animal Hospital on Douglas.

After being treated for exposure, the dog was taken to the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals' shelter on Napier Lane.

How did she end up floundering in the sea in the vicinity of Point Grey?

The mystery was solved Monday afternoon.

A friend of her owner, who has one of her pups, claimed her.

Chris Maloney, like the rescued dog's owner, is a commercial fisherman.

He said her master, who has a cabin at Haney, was on the way out to sea again.

His boat was being pitched around in heavy seas.

He didn't notice his pet being washed over the side until it was too late.

Maloney has radioed the dog's owner, who is still at sea, and a joyful reunion with his pet is planned on his return to port.

Maloney recognized his friend's pet in a story and picture carried in Saturday's Times. He had put in with his boat at Sidney.

He got in touch with the SPCA.

For the last 10 days the SPCA had been trying to trace the dog's owner through their counterparts in Vancouver and Vancouver radio stations. Nobody came forward.

An SPCA official said, "It was sheer luck — or something — that brought Mr. Maloney into Sidney."

TOURIST ALERT ON PAGE 29

Apprenticeship With Eoka

United Press International

Newspaper publisher Nicos Sampson, sworn in as new president of Cyprus, was still a teen-ager when the late guerrilla leader Gen. George Grivas arrived on the island in the 1950s to fight for independence from Britain.

Sampson, 39, is considered emotional and impulsive, a contrast to the deposed leader of the island nation, Archbishop Makarios, who had a reputation for being deliberate and methodical.

Sampson was born in Nicosia and was working as a news photographer when Grivas formed a guerrilla group, Eoka.

The group was formed from among the Greek majority on the island to fight for independence from Britain and Enosis — Union with Greece.

The British police noticed that Sampson was always the first photographer to take pictures of men shot by Eoka guerillas and soon suspected him of involvement in the shootings.

He was arrested in 1957, convicted of complicity in the killings and sentenced to death.

His sentence was commuted to life imprisonment and he was sent to Britain to serve it. But three years later, his island became independent and Sampson was allowed to return.

Still only 25, Sampson became publisher of Mahi (The Battle), a daily newspaper in Nicosia. Later, he added a weekly newspaper, Tharros (Courage).

Zainvoth newspapers promoted Enosis, though they did not become the official organs of the Enosis movement in Cyprus.

"Sampson always had his own way fo following a political or ideological line," a former colleague said.

When Greek and Turkish Cypriots turned against each other in December 1963, Sampson organized his own private army and fought the Turks in the Nicosia suburbs.

When the fighting subsided, Sampson ran for the house of representatives as leader of the Progressive party.

While other members of the house of representatives turned more and more toward complete disengagement of their island republic from Greece, Sampson became more nationalistic.

Rifts Appear For Tanaka

TOKYO (UPI) — Two key cabinet members resigned today, threatening to break up Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka's troubled two-year-old government.

Finance Minister Takeo Fukuda and State Minister Shigeru Hori stepped down, raising to three the number of resignations from Tanaka's cabinet since last week's parliamentary elections.

Deputy Prime Minister Takeo Miki resigned last Friday, marking the first public crack in the Liberal Democratic Party cabinet. He said he was opposed to Tanaka's political posture.

A spokesman for the prime minister's office said Fukuda, 68, and Hori, 71, submitted their resignations after separate meetings today with Tanaka.

Fukuda, who lost to Tanaka in a 1972 bid for the Liberal Democratic leadership, blamed the prime minister's "plutocracy" for party setbacks in the July 7 election.

"I demand a thorough reorganization of the party structure, but I don't want to see the collapse of the party because it will lead to the collapse of Japan," Fukuda told a news conference after his resignation.

Hori said he decided to give up his cabinet post "to assume responsibility for failure" in avoiding the split between Tanaka and Fukuda.

The prime minister's spokesman said Tanaka withheld an immediate decision on the resignations. Political sources said, however, there was little chance of the ministers staying on and a major cabinet reshuffle seemed inevitable.

The resignation of Mike, 67, one of Tanaka's strongest supporters, dealt a heavy blow to the political future of Tanaka.

The prime minister's stature was already hurt by the loss of his party's upper house majority in the recent parliamentary vote.

Tanaka faces re-election next July as party president. The leader of the ruling party is usually prime minister.

Trustees Oppose More Appointees

School board trustees still "carry the day" at Camosun College council meetings, even though they are no longer a majority on the council, Greater Victoria school board chairman Peter Bunn said Monday.

Bunn and other trustees voiced opposition to the increase in government-appointed members of the council, which since January has been a 5-5 split between trustees and appointees.

"The commitment constantly has been by the trustees" on the council, said Bunn, pointing out that one appointee has attended very few council meetings since being named by the government.

Trustee Walter Donald said he thought both college councils and university boards of governors should be elected by the public rather than appointed.

"There is a democratic principle involved," he said.

The provincial government's task force on community colleges recommended in its working paper this spring that college councils have 10 government-appointed members, and five elected by students and staff.

Blood Goal Just Passed

A blood clinic at Red Cross House Monday narrowly surpassed its objective of 125 donors, drawing 127 to contribute blood.

Today's clinic at the same location, 1046 Fort, will be open from 1:30 to 4:30 this afternoon and 6:30 to 9 this evening. Anyone requiring transportation can call 382-2213.

Last of the current series of clinics will be held Wednesday aboard HMCS Provider at dockyard for ships' crews in port.

Rival Rebels Clash In Luanda Riots

LUANDA, Angola (Reuter) — Shooting broke out in the centre of Luanda Monday and unofficial reports said about 20 people were killed and 15 wounded as troops broke up two demonstrations.

There were no official figures on the casualty toll.

The demonstrations took place as tension rose in this Portuguese African territory, where the murder of a white taxi-driver last week set off two nights of violence in which seven people died.

Four of them were buried Monday at an incident-free ceremony attended by 30,000 people.

The burial also marked the first time that flags of the two rival liberation movements have flown together. The National Front for the Liberation of Angola and the Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola, both displayed their flags, banners and slogans.

In Lisbon, President Antonio de Spinola announced that a government mission is going to Luanda at once to inquire into the bloody racial fighting.

Gen. Spinola's announcement followed a three-hour junta meeting. After the meeting the armed forces chief of staff, Gen. Costa Gomes, stated that a message had been sent to the commander-in-chief in Angola informing him of the measures to be taken "to restore interracial peace and harmony."

Government sources said the junta also studied the situation in Mozambique, where an estimated 1,000 guerillas were said to have infiltrated to the area of Vila Pery in the centre of the territory between Beira and the Rhodesian border.

Meanwhile, Premier-designate Vasco Concalves today resumed talks on formation of a new army-leftwing coalition government to end a political crisis heightened by the reports of violence in the two African territories.

Goncalves told newsmen he might be able to announce the makeup of the new government in the afternoon.

ABSTRACT MAPLE GAMES SYMBOL

EDMONTON (CP) — A red, white and blue abstract maple leaf design was unveiled today as the logo for the 1978 Commonwealth Games.

Michael Prytula, 34, an Edmonton free-lance artist who designed the symbol, was presented with a $1,500 cheque from the Commonwealth Games Foundation.

"I feel a great sense of personal achievement," said Prytula, whose graphic was selected from 78 submissions by 49 city artists in a design competition.

The logo was to be flashed tonight on national television during the olympic lottery draw.

Manitoba Mulls Land Takeover

WINNIPEG (CP) — Manitoba Agriculture Minister Sam Uskiw said Monday the provincial government should take control of all land now held by speculators as a move to hold down housing prices.

"It's a very revolutionary step, but damn it all, when a few people make such profits it's just not right," he said.

In the last legislaive session, Uskiw moved a resolution which set up a committee to investigate land transactions and ownership.

The resolution was prompted by concern that foreigners were acquiring too much Manitoba land, but Uskiw now says the emphasis may have shifted to speculation.

"I don't think there should be a dollar made on speculation . . . the cost of housing is so high," Uskiw said.

"And I'm not worried about setting precedents; if public control will save $3,000 on the price of a home, it'll be worthwhile.

"I would even roll the speculators' profits back."

Mines Minister Sidney Green agrees with Uskiw's position.

"Say a man owned a parking lot at the corner of Portage and Main," he said. "He's had it for 100 years and he does nothing with it. But the public creates value for that lot by building a community around it. Yet we are rewarding him for not creating wealth."

RESTAURANT REBUILT

The Shah Jahan Restaurant at 1010 Fort is back in business today after a two-day shutdown following collapse of part of its west wall late Saturday night.

Last customers had just left the restaurant when the front portion of the west wall, enclosing an entrance patio, suddenly collapsed, taking with it part of the patio and archway.

Concord Developments Ltd. had been excavating Friday on the next lot, preparing for construction of a three-storey office building.

The wall has been temporarily repaired.

'We'll Bounce Back' T. C. Douglas Vows

LADYSMITH — The New Democratic Party will "bounce back" from its 15-seat loss in the July 8 federal election, T. C. Douglas predicted this week at a meeting in Yellow Point.

"They've buried this party so many times," said the MP for Nanaimo, Cowichan and the Islands, a former NDP national leader.

"In 1958 when Diefenbaker swept the country the old CCF was cut to seven seats, but we bounced back.

"In 1968 when Trudeaumania hit the country we lost seats, but we bounced back. And we'll bounce back again," Douglas prophesied.

The NDP had 31 seats in Parliament before the election, and now have 16.

Most IWA Back

The splinter group claims workers should refrain from returning to work until a mass meeting is called to vote on the settlement proposal.

In Port Alberni, only 600 of 1,600 area loggers were reported working today, although employees in the three mills - some 1,000 - started work at 8 a.m.

The 1,200 member Courtenay-Campbell River local will meet Wednesday to decide whether to return to work.

On the mainland 12,000 woodworkers of New Westminster and Vancouver locals have returned to work.

Base rate in the old contract which expired June 15 was $4.45 an hour.

The new tentative agreement calls for the basic 12-per cent wage increase or 65-cent minimum in a one-year contract already rejected by 275 votes. However, the cost-of-living formula and tradesmen's rates were adjusted during talks carried out under provincial government scrutiny last Friday.

The offer on tradesmen's rates has been increased to $7.29½ from $7.05 and to $7.40 from $7.28 in the previous offer.

By increasing these rates, industry spokesmen have indicated a lessened chance of IWA tradesmen walking out because the tradesmen in the pulp and paper industry now earn $7.50½.

That adjustment was announced after pulp and paper workers left their jobs last Wednesday because they said a mid-contract adjustment of tradesmen's rates was not forthcoming.

The industry's employees at 21 mills returned to work during the weekend, and mills should be producing at full capacity by Wednesday.

Oil Firms Toss Ball

VANCOUVER (CP) — Three oil companies have rejected provincial guidelines for gasoline price increases and a member of the British Columbia Energy Commission said Monday the next move is up to the provincial cabinet.

Don Johannessen said Shell Co. Ltd., Gulf Co. Ltd., and Texaco Co. Ltd., "have indicated they won't go along with provincial guidelines limiting price increases to eight cents a gallon instead of the federal ceiling of 9.2 cents."

He said the three companies remained form in their decision despite assurances from Ottawa that acceptance of the B.C. guideline wouldn't affect subsidies they receive on the East Coast.

Johannessen said the next move is up to the cabinet, which could force acceptance of the guidelines by proclaiming a section of the Energy Act that gives the commission power to regulate prices.

8 Lost in Slide

CHAMONIX, France (Reuter) — Eight persons were feared killed in an avalanche which swept down the Tacul peak in the Mount Blanc region today.

Police said the avalanche crashed on eight climbers as they tackled the 13,000-foot peak, sweeping them into a gully.

"We are almost certain all are dead but we won't know definitely until the rescue teams get to the bodies," a police spokesman said.

Police did not know the climbers' nationalities.

Passing the mid point in July the weather statistics continue to indicate unseasonable conditions. Temperatures are running below normal and precipitation above average. The statistics compiled at Vancouver are indicative of the unseasonable July weather throughout the province. Maximum temperatures here have not reached their normal for any day in July so far and in general have been running 5 to 10 degrees below. The average precipitation amount for July was surpassed on the ninth day of the month and is now closing in on the record amount for any July.

With yet another Pacific disturbance approaching the coast little change in this trend is anticipated in the next few days.

Guerrilla Bombs Hit Bike Race

SAINT LARY SOULAN, France (UPI) — Spanish anarchists bombed support vehicles of the Tour de France cycling classic today and later set fire to 13 cars in the Roman Catholic pilgrim town of Lourdes, police said.

There were no injuries.

Three separate plastic explosions destroyed or damaged six cars and a motorcycle, including the photo laboratory of the French News Agency here.

Leaflets signed by the Groups of International Revolutionary Action (GARI) denounced "Spanish Fascism" and the Catholic Church and demanded release of political prisoners. GARI is the group which recently kidnapped, then freed, the Spanish director of a Paris bank, Angel Baltasar Suarez.

The group ordered Spanish riders to drop out of the tour or face undefined reprisals. "The actions tonight were only a warning," the leaflets said.

Tour official Felix Levitan said: "We do not underestimate the threats, but we will not bow to blackmail."

EMERY QUITS

Times News Services

VANCOUVER — Vancouver Art Gallery director Tony Emery has quit the posifion he has held for the past five years and departed on a cruise timed to coincide with the announceement of his resignation.

Gallery president Roy Jessiman said that money was not an issue in Emery's departure, although the gallery and Emery had been deadlocked in salary negotiaions since January.

According to a gallery vice-president Robin Mayor — a close personal friend of Emery's — the resignation was "the culmination of a lot of little things.

Sometimes a lot of little things become compounded into one big thing," he added.

WASHINGTON DUO FINALLY SURRENDERS

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Two convicts who had seized eight hostages in a bid for freedom stripped off their clothes, laid down their weapons and put handcuffs on each other Monday night after police foiled their final attempt to escape through a basement airduct.

Then Frank Gorham, 26, and Robert Jones, 24, surrendered to assistant police chief Maurice Cullinane, who said he gained their trust during the five-day siege at the U.S. district courthouse that began Thursday afternoon.

The two were flown to a maximum security federal prison in Atlanta.

Gorham and Jones had been inside the cellblock since Thursday when they seized eight hostages and tried to bargain for a freedom flight to Africa.

They released one of the hostages Friday and held the others until the seven fled Sunday in a daring escape engineered by one, a deputy U.S. marshal.

The final act of the drama began about 9 p.m. EDT Monday when they used an axe to hack their way into the air duct. For the first time since Gorham and Jones had barricaded themselves inside the basement lockup, officers exchanged gunfire with the pair, then used tear gas to force them back into their confinement.

No one was hurt.

Keeping Saanich Kids On Straight, Narrow

Riding down the straight and narrow line are youngsters taking the summer safe bicycling course at the Saanich police station parking lot. Constable Barrie Kidd and assistant Cheryl Hoyte, with clipboard, have their eyes on the rider in checkered pants who couldn't quite stay in line. The exercise is to train more than 450 children between nine and 14 who registered for the courses to ride straight in heavy traffic. The courses are offered in three two-hour sessions.

French Bill Step Closer

QUEBEC (CP) — The controversial official language bill passed second reading approval in principle — Monday with opposition to the legislation in Liberal ranks whittled down to two members.

On a recorded vote John Ciaccia and George Springate joined the Parti Quebecois and Creditistes in voting against the government, which won the vote 80-10.

After the vote, Ciaccia told reporters he hopes to attend sessions of the assembly's education committee, which now takes over clause-by-clause study of the legislation, although he is not a committee member.

He said he did not expect reprisals for having bolted the party line, but Springate said disciplinary measures could be taken against him.

Ciaccia said he could not vote for the bill because, in his opinion, parts of it are illegal, it does not sufficiently recognize the rights of English Quebecers to English schools, and it gives too much power to a bureaucracy which does not reflect the ethnic make-up of the province.

U.K. Furore Flares On Test-Tube Tots

HULL, England (Reuter) — A controversy blew up among medical researchers today over an eminent British professor's statement that the world's first test-tube babies have been born and are thriving.

Other specialists in the field said they know nothing of the births and angrily challenged him to produce more details.

But the man who broke the news Monday, Prof. Douglas Bevis of Leeds University, stayed silent. A secretary said the university has been inundated with telephone calls but the professor is refusing to speak to the press.

Bevis, 55, announced that three test tube babies have been born—one in England and two in West Europe. He said the mothers' eggs had been removed, fertilized with their husbands' sperm in a laboratory and then implanted in the womb.

He said the oldest child now is about 18 months old and all three are in good health with no sign of abnormality. He refused to give any further details, saying privacy was essential for the children and he was not involved in the operations anyway.

"I am astounded that Prof. Bevis should have made this statement," said Patrick Steptoe, a Manchester gynecologist who, along with a Cambridge University scientist, Dr. Robert Edwards, has pioneered research in this field for the last five years.

"As far as I know, no one in this country or anywhere else has yet succeeded in this technique," Steptoe said.

"I feel very angry indeed about this because all that will happen is that thousands of childless women will be plunged into an immediate state of anxiety . . . Prof. Bevis must now justify his comments."

Bevis and his team at Leeds University have long been rivals of Steptoe and Edwards.

In 1969, the latter pair announced the first successful fertilization of a human egg in a test tube. Dr. Bevis achieved the same result some weeks later.

At Cambridge, Dr. Edwards also reacted hotly to the Bevis statement.

"I assume the mother must be a patient of Dr. Bevis as he has announced it," he said. "If he has done it, give him my congratulations.

"If he hasn't, I want to know what the heck he is getting up and spouting about."

Observers said that as privacy is such a vital consideration in this field, denials were perhaps inevitable. There was even speculation that Bevis's own team may have been involved despite his assertions to the contrary.

Argentine Violence Flares

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — A renewed outbreak of political shootings has presented Isabel Peron with her first major crisis since becoming president of Argentina.

Four assassins burst into a suburban restaurant Monday and sprayed bullets into the back of Arturo Mor Roig, interior minister in the former military regime and architect of the elections that put a Peronist government in power.

Police killed one of Mor Roig's murderers and arrested a second in a shootout with occupants of the getaway car stopped a few hours after the assassination.

The murder of Mor Roig, 59, came a week after unidentified gunmen shot and seriously wounded Leandro Salato, a ranking official of the ministry of social welfare.

Salata is a close associate of Jose Lopez Rega, who served as personal secretary to the late Juan Peron and holds the same job under his widow.

Last week, a leftist woman follower of Peron was raped and murdered, reportedly by members of a rightest Peronist group.

Mor Roig was at least the 42nd victim of political assassination in the last ten months in Argentina.

Nixon Fires Aid Chief

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon has fired the head of the Office of Economic Opportunity for trying to save some of the programs the president wants abolished.

Alvin Arnett said Nixon adviser Dean Burch called him Monday afternoon and "requested my resignation to become official at 10 a.m. Tuesday. His line was that the president does not want OEO and that I have been accused of lobbying to continue the agency."

The resignation will become effective July 31, and Arnett will be replaced by OEO general counsel Burt Gallegos, acting deputy director of the agency under Arnett's predecessor, Howard Phillips, who was forced out of office by a federal judge for trying to kill the agency without congressional approval.

Arnett said he had fought against Nixon's plan to abolish the agency "because I've been concerned about the programs for the poor."

One a congressional source said the firing was "impeachment politics" on Nixon's part.

"What else could it be?" asked the source who refused to be identified. "Everyone knows OEO is dead but there are a certain number of senators who want Arnett's scalp, and Nixon needs 34 senators to vote (against conviction if he is impeached) and so he's giving them what they want."

Asked if he thought impeachment was behind his ouster, Arnett said "I've heard that too, for weeks."

HUNTING RAPIST, GROUP SLAYS MAN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Louis Sisler, a lobbyist for the National Rifle Association, has died of gunshot wounds inflicted by persons who claimed to be looking for a rapist, police said.

Sisler, 48, answered the door of his father-in-law's home about 11 p.m. Saturday.

"We're looking for the guy who raped our sister," one member of the group told Sisler.

"I'm sorry, you must have the wrong house," Sisler replied.

When he tried to close the door, the assailants fired several shots through the screen door. One, a shotgun blast, tore a hole several inches wide in the wooden door.

Choquette Denies Lanctot Rumors

QUEBEC (CP) — Justice Minister Jerome Choquette Monday denied radio reports that Jacques Lanctot, one of the men involved in the 1970 kidnapping of British trade minister James Cross, has returned to Canada.

Lanctot has been living in Cuba since Cross was released in return for a safe conduct out of Canada, but was recently reported to be in Paris along with Yves Langlois and Jean-Marc Carbonneau, two other men involved in the kidnapping.

Choquette, replying to a question from Camil Samson, Creditiste member for Rouyn-Noranda, told the national assembly there was no foundation to reports Lanctot was in Canada.

"I have inquired of police authorities and their investigations have revealed that this news is false," he said. "It is in fact based on an anonymous telephone call to a radio station."

Radio station CFCF in Montreal said in a report Saturday that Lanctot might have arrived in Canada using a false passport.

Montreal Urban Community police and RCMP spokesmen earlier said they could not comment on the radio reports.

A Leopard Doesn't Change It's Spots

Opposition Leader Bill Bennett has hinted that he would support the move, old Social Crediters who remember Major Douglas' economic theories deplore it, but it looks as though Social Credit in B.C. may get a new name. The Omineca Social Credit Association has proposed changing the name to the B.C. Party because it would allow Liberals and Conservatives to join in one free-enterprise party.

Socred Leader Bill Bennett has often said he wants to take the old right wing party into more central political territory. Considering modern political realities it's a good idea. In theory all those voters, who for historic or other reasons, can't support Liberals or Conservatives at the provincial level, and who found Social Credit's rural populism unacceptable, would flock to the new fold.

But theories have a way of disintegrating in practice. Old Social Crediters — and there were many in evidence at the party's last convention — don't automatically accept the suave younger Bennett with his three-piece suits and undramatic speeches. If the party moves to the centre of the road some of the old guard may remain sniping in the ditch.

The new Unity Party will also aim its pitch at the same people a refurbished Social Credit party by any other name will try to reach. Nor should it be forgotten that a tattered Liberal party with a newly invigorated leader remains the natural centre of B.C. politics.

The name, B.C. party, has no partisan associations in the public mind. It's leader, if this is to be Social Credit's new name, is young, articulate, and most important, patient. But whether a party calls itself by a new or an old name, it is only the sum of its past in the voter's eyes, until its actions prove otherwise. A Unity Party or a B.C. Party remains a theatrical device to win the province's so-called free enterprise vote.

Most people who are old enough to vote usually have their minds made up about politics. Changing a name doesn't always change the contents of the store. And even people who are not old enough to vote know that a leopard has much difficulty changing its spots.

". . . sometimes we just pack up all our stuff, pile in the car and pretend we're off for the weekend somewhere . . . it's FUN . . .!"

More Than Patrols Needed

The troubled story of Cyprus took a new turn with yesterday's coup that toppled President Makarios and plunged the island into renewed strife. The situation could well produce violent action between the Greek and Turkish forces and place the United Nations peace-keeping troops — sent to Cyprus in 1964 — in jeopardy.

The significance of Cyprus, however, goes far beyond its blue-watered Mediterranean shores. Four-fifths of the island population is Greek, most of the rest Turkish, and the fortunes of the two sides provide matters of urgent importance to the capitals at Athens and Ankara. Both the parent countries have ordered military alerts. Cyprus at almost any time could serve as the spark to ignite Greece and Turkey in war. Such a situation is a constant threat to Western and Soviet plans for world peace.

Although the island has been independent under a constitution for the past 14 years, the situation has rarely been stable as both ethnic components guard their political rights jealously. Archbishop Makarios precipitated an outbreak in 1963 when he attempted to alter the constitution to give the majority Greeks a still larger share in the government, and the resulting tension required a UN presence involving Canada and seven other nations. Since 1967 the island has been virtually two armed camps separated by the neutral police force.

The presence of the UN troops, at great expense, was not, of course, expected to produce a solution, only a cooling of tempers. But the present almost inevitable situation reinforces the belief that UN intervention to patrol areas of military threat is not enough. Further UN participation is required in the form of active and progressive efforts to achieve a viable stability. Otherwise such surveillance could be indefinite — an unsatisfactory situation both for the UN, the contributing countries and the local people directly concerned. UN troops should not be expected to make camp on perpetually smouldering ashes.

The solution obviously lies as much in Greece and Turkey as in Cyprus, and there should be a concerted international effort to establish a permanent situation on the island — perhaps without the presence of Archbishop Makarios, who seems to have lit many a match around the powder barrels both before and after his banishment by Britain to the Seychelles in 1956. If this relatively small but threatening hot spot is beyond UN capabilities to quench, it may be that the peripatetic Mr. Kissinger could be called in to provide the magic touch.

JAMES RESTON

Where Will We Find Food?

During the worst of the oil crisis, Americans complained that the nations of the Middle East monopolized the world's oil reserves and created great hardship by charging the highest prices possible.

Now, with less publicity, the world is facing a food crisis and the main question this time is what the United States and Canada will do about it. For North America now controls a larger share of the world's exportable supplies of food grains than the Middle East does of oil.

The analogy, of course, is not precise, because the U.S. is not withholding grain from nations for political purposes, but the price of wheat, soybeans and corn has more than doubled in the last twenty months and the nations that need food the most are precisely those least able to pay for it.

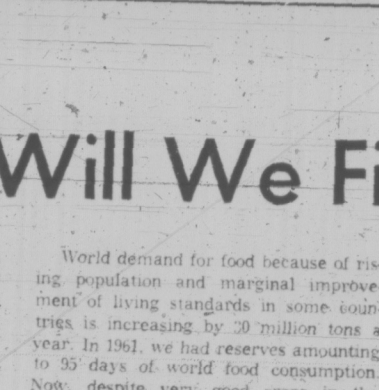
Hard Questions

This raises some hard political and even moral questions. As Lester Brown of the Overseas Development Council put it to the Rockefeller Commission on Critical Choices of Americans: Can we rely primarily on the marketplace to set the price and determine the distribution of so essential a commodity as food? And should Americans continue to consume as much fodder as they now do, most of us consuming more than we actually need?

"There is little doubt," Brown told the Rockefeller Commission, "but that a year from now we will see the largest food deficit of any region in history unfolding in Asia—a situation where political leaders in the more affluent countries, including the United States, may have to decide whether to throw up their hands and sort of cast Asia adrift . . . or go to consumers and ask the food equivalent of turning the thermostat down six degrees — that is, reducing consumption of, say livestock products, in order to free up many millions of tons of grain to move into Asia."

World demand for food because of rising population and marginal improvement of living standards in some countries is increasing by 30 million tons a year. In 1961, we had reserves amounting to 95 days of world food consumption. Now, despite very good crops in the major grain-producing countries last year, reserves are down to 27 days and declining by 10 million tons a year.

The U.S. farmers and the Department of Agriculture have probably made as great a contribution to world peace as the soldiers at the Pentagon or the diplomats at the State Department. Nobody can say they didn't do their part. In the last twenty years, they have increased corn production at a phenomenal rate. So great has been the demand for soybeans that one acre out of six in the U.S. is now planted to that crop, and U.S. soybean exports now bring in more money than all American high technology exports such as computers or jet aircraft.



Vital Protein

Meanwhile, enormous progress has been made in increasing the production of poultry, eggs and milk. Brown notes that the average milk production of a cow in India today is about 600 pounds a year. In the U.S., it averages 10,000 pounds a year.

This, however, does not satisfy the U.S. Department of Agriculture experts. They want to know why a cow in the state of Washington produced 44,000 pounds of milk last year, and why the average American hen, even when tricked by controlled lighting, produces only 232 eggs a year, while the Japanese actually induced one hen to lay 365.

It is a particular disappointment in Washington that the scientists have not been able to produce multiple births in cattle. This is really, to use Henry Kissinger's term, the "conceptual breakthrough" the agricultural scientists are looking for. They would rather MIRV a cow than a missile, but so far they haven't managed to do it, and supply keeps running behind demand.

Few Idle Acres

There are other reasons. The U.S. is running out of idle acres. Fertilizer is in short supply because of the rising price of oil and the increased demand. While the average person in poor countries consumes about 400 pounds of grain a year, the average North American is now consuming nearly a ton of grain a year, about 100 pounds of it in the form of beer and whisky.

Also, while the U.S. is now putting much marginal land back into production, it is also taking out of production about a million good acres a year for highways, shopping centres and golf courses.

It is true, of course, that the Malthusians had been predicting disaster in this race between people and food for a very long time, but the surplus of people and the shortages of water, land, energy and common sense are beginning to catch up with us again.

The guess here is that the U.S. could make more friends and progress in the world by solving the food crisis than by fiddling with the missile crisis. But this will take some doing.

The rich world doesn't really believe in the coming food crisis any more than it believes in the oil crisis, but it will. One day we'll all be weight watchers, including Henry Kissinger, but not until the crisis is really much better understood.

Britain's Tough Nuclear Choice

LONDON — Britain's labor government made the basic decision to opt for a British heavy water atomic reactor system shortly after coming to power last February.

While publicly allowing the long-running review of nuclear policy for future electricity generation to reach completion the government privately decided Britain should have substantial independence from foreign nuclear technology, meaning American nuclear technology.

Canada's CANDU reactor was passed over but Canada is to sell substantial supplies of heavy water and to exchange nuclear knowledge with the British due to the similarities between the two systems.

A major factor in the British decision was doubts about the safety of the American light water reactor design, doubts that were increased by traumatic experience of the Flixborough chemical factory catastrophe.

Already there are those in Britian saying the wrong system has been chosen. But these complaints hardly match up to the pressure to buy American that this and the previous government have undergone over the past year.

Costly Advertising

Westinghouse, the American company selling the light water reactor, spent hundreds of thousands of dollars in costly advertising and in flying over teams of experts and salesmen to push their system.

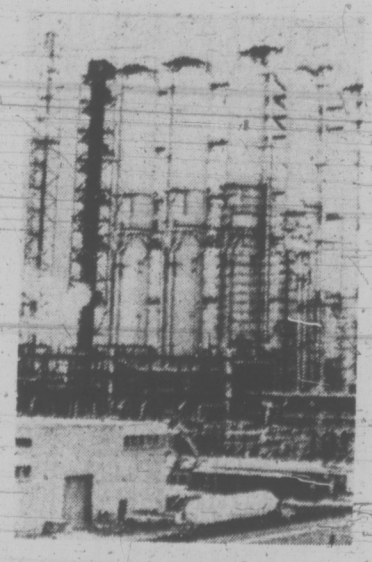
Their biggest supporters were two of the most powerful men in the British nuclear arena: Sir Arnold Weinstock, managing director of GEC which controls the national Nuclear Corp., set up to build whatever system Britain chose, and Arthur Hawkins, chairman of the Central Electricity Generating Board, the biggest customer the power stations will have.

They felt the Westinghouse system, which uses light water and is known as the pressurized water reactor method, gave the best guarantees for cost, delivery schedules and speed of feeding new electricity into the national grid.

They furthermore saw enormous advantages in joining with France and the United States to form a consortium to sell the Westinghouse system worldwide, Britain's share to be part of the work in building the reactors that would be sold.

But Hawkins made a fatal error when he failed to convince the parliamentary select committee on science and technology of the safety of the American system and when he said there was no urgency in making the choice of system.

The evidence that swung the committee and which dominated its report was given by Sir Alan Cottrell, the government's chief scientific adviser, and by E. C. Williams, chief inspector of nuclear installations. They indicated that there were scientific reasons to doubt the safety of the pressurized water reactor.



Nuclear Knowhow

This centres on the possibility of leaks of radio-active material.

The pressurized water reactor has a large steel pressure vessel which contains the radio-active elements and surrounding water. The steam-generating heavy water reactor instead uses a series of small pressure tubes.

Sir Alan said a fracture could occur in the pressurized water reactor steel vessel without advance warning.

Sir John Hill, chairman of the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority, said the British system had a built-in fail-safe factor.

"The pressure tubes are thin in metallurgical terms," he said. "In other words they would split before they would explode, they would leak before they would explode and the same is also true of the steam drums in the reactor."

Other factors in the decision were opposition to bypassing British technology from the country's nuclear scientists; the trade unions and Labor party backbenchers; independence in energy production being seen as desirable after the Arab oil price increases; and the need to safeguard the future of the coal industry by phasing in nuclear-produced electricity at a reduced pace over this decade.

National electricity demand forecasts for the coming decade were revised downward in recent weeks, weakening the argument of the Central Electricity Generating Board that a swift buildup of nuclear generating capacity was required.

This government attitude is implicit in the announcement that the first reactors are to be in the 600-650 megawatt production range rather than reactors of double that size sought by the electricity board.

Another factor in favor of the British system was the claim of its proponents that its modular design means a maximum of workshop fabrication and a minimum of site construction work, simplifying the process of scaling up from small to larger units.

Scaling Up

This would apply to scaling up from the 100 megawatt prototype steam generating heavy water reactor that the British have been successfully operating as a power station at Winfrith, Dorset, since 1967. For the last three winters this reactor has supplied the national grid with a total of 25 million kilowatts of electricity.

The year-long public debate has been vigorous, approaching bitterness over the safety factor. American and other scientists have vehemently contested the suggestion that the Westinghouse system is unsafe.

Weinstock now wants to reduce the GEC stake in the National Nuclear Corp. from 50 to about 20 per cent, although he will still be responsible for managing the building of the heavy water system. Lord Aldington, chairman of the National Nuclear Corp. and deputy chairman of GEC, says despite his strong previous opposition he now will work hard to make the chosen system succeed.

Given the sad history of Britain's failures and miscalculations in the nuclear power station field over the last decade, there is an element of finger-crossing here to the hope that the right decision has been taken this time.

Postal Vote

Is it not a crying shame that so many interested people are prevented from voting in elections?

What reason is there that there should not be a postal vote in Canada? This would enable, to exercise their right, (a) all shut-ins who are unable to avail themselves of the fleet of cars offered by candidates, (b) fishermen, and (c) travelling businessmen.

The system is quite simple and cannot be abused. — Margaret Richards, 207—1070 Moss St.

School Bus

I am writing to you about our situation on top of the Malahat in getting our children to school.

We had meetings for the September school start and we have been told that the bus service has been cut off for the kids going on shift system at George Bonner School. Grade 7 is going to George Bonner this September on shift which makes it Grade 7-8-9.

When I moved up here 14 years ago my children and also all the other children were picked up outside our driveways. That was cut out and they had to walk to the main highway (Cousins Corner) for the bus. Now that has been stopped and all the children on shift system have to find their way to the bottom of Bamberton Hill (about 3 miles) for the bus.

We were told that if we took our children to school we could get 25 cents per student per day and 12 cents per mile. Can you imagine the amount of time this involves when some people have children in different shifts? They would always be driving on the highway and in winter it's sometimes pretty bad, as you know. There are some places like the trailer court at Spectacle Lake where the road is not cleared of snow until after the highways are cleared.

Trustee David Bradbury outlined the problem about the buses, and "it seems to have fallen on deaf ears." I think he has the deaf ears. Our taxes have gone up and the services we get are going down. We have always had buses and they are going to be taken off for all these kids.

I do not call this progress for our extra taxes. We are going to write to Miss Dailly to see if we can get something done before September. — F. R. Swift, Malahat P.O.

What a stimulating front-page story on the values, past and present, of Bob Williams' home — truly Page 1 material! I do hope you'll provide us with a sequel, telling us the cost of the Williams' new Vic. West home when they buy it, along with its value three years ago. I also hope you'll retain Reporter Snoop on your staff long enough to give us a few more front page scoops: "The Secret Love-life of Minister X, as seen through the Keyhole" or "Does Minister Y really wear Long Underwear?" might do for starters. So much more interesting than these dreary world affairs that most newspapers fill up their front pages with! — Susan Gage, 900 Falmouth Road

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of July 16, 1914

BELGRADE — The relations between Austria-Hungary and Servia continue to be strained, although commercial interests in both countries have endeavored to ameliorate these conditions since, owing to their proximity to each other, the trade between the two is naturally very important. The efforts made by Hungary to improve these relations are very often counteracted by certain acts on the part of the Austrian government, or on the part of some of those Austrian interests which are more or less supported by the government. The Servian government recently refused a concession to a Hungarian insurance company which desired to establish a branch office in Belgrade.

Scarred Children of the Streets

By TERI SHAW

BOGOTA — In most large cities of South America, homeless children live in the streets.

They survive in any way they can. In Guayaquil, Ecuador, they beg for coins from tourists; in David, Panama, they sell lottery tickets; in Sao Paulo, the booming industrial city of Brazil, they sell flowers at sidewalk cafes.

Most are boys. Girls have less freedom and are often sold into servitude as unpaid maids or prostitutes.

These children are a reflection of the social problems of Latin America — the population explosion, the rush to the cities, unemployment; inadequate school systems.

The problem is particularly visible in Bogota where an estimated 6,000 children live in the streets.

In Bogota, they are called "gamines," from the French word for street urchin, "gamin."

The "gamines" of Bogota live in a Dickensian world of squalor and violence, begging in front of hotels, offering women to tourists and engaging in petty thievery.

Late at night, they gather outside night clubs and restaurants, crowding around tourists or well-dressed Colombians, clamoring for pesos. Some are brash and cocky, others wide-eyed and solemn.

The older boys — over 12 or 13 — sometimes find work washing cars shining shoes or running errands. The younger ones — from 4 to 12 — find it easier to beg for pesos or steal food, handbags and umbrellas.

Unless they are caught stealing, they are virtually ignored by the police, and most have no home they can return to. Many smoke, drink and sniff gasoline fumes or smoke marijuana, according to Dr. Ofar Ospina, a young psychiatrist who has worked with "gamines" for the past three years. For many of the boys a criminal future is almost inevitable, he said.

"Prolonged vagrancy leaves scars on these children that are almost impossible to correct," Dr. Ospina said.

Dr. Ospina works for an unusual institution named "Club Michin," which tries to prevent children from becoming trapped in a life of vagrancy.

Partially financed by the government, the club runs eight homes for boys who have lived in the streets or are in danger of becoming "gamines." Each home is run by a married couple with children of their own.

The house parents get help from Dr. Ospina, a social worker, volunteers and teachers. But the essential element in helping the boys is the affection provided by their new "parents." "The common denominator in these boys is the lack of maternal affection," Dr. Ospina said. "They all have similar symptoms—confusion about their place in time and in society, malnutrition and deficiencies in motor development.

The first person to provide affection for a boy who joins the club, is a slight, 22-year-old woman named Erica. She and her husband, Ruben, run a home for club newcomers.

Surrounded by 26 jumping, shouting boys, Erica recently guided two visitors through the house, showing off three rooms of bunk beds, the sparsely furnished television room and a small room with chairs and tables where the boys do homework.

Erica's three-year-old son toddled along, apparently perfectly at home with the boisterous "gamines."

"It is not hard to love so many children," she said calmly. "They soon learn to obey our rules, and they really want to change."

Dr. Ospina painted a sad picture of the "family" lives left behind by boys now living on the chill, rainy streets of Bogota. Many are children of country people who came to Bogota seeking a better life, only to discover no jobs for persons with few skills.

Often, Dr. Ospina said, the father disappeared, leaving the mother with a large family to support, perhaps by doing domestic work or selling lottery tickets. The children are left at home in the care of the oldest one, usually a 10-to 12-year-old. Sometimes the mother has a series of lovers who mistreat the children of her earlier unions.

"The mother is exhausted from working, from her fights with her boyfriends, and she takes it out on the children. Soon the older boys go into the street, sometimes taking their younger brothers along," he said.

"The first thing a "gamine" does when he leaves home, or joins a new gang is change his name," Dr. Ospina said. "When he comes to us, the first thing he says is that his mother is dead and his father doesn't know him. It isn't until two or three months later that we find out his name and who his parents are."

Pedro is a 10-year-old with large brown eyes and an engaging smile. He moved into the Club Michin a year ago, three years after he left home.

"My mother kicked me out because I hit my younger brothers and sisters," he said.

Luis, 11, who belonged to the same gang as Pedro but came to the club several months later, did not want to talk about why he left home. But he eagerly joined Pedro in describing life on the streets of Bogota.

"We asked for money, and sometimes we'd steal," Pedro said. "We'd steal windshield wipers and sell them to motorists whose windshield wipers had been stolen."

The boys said they would beg until they had about 20 cents, enough to buy a meal of meat and rice at a stand in the marketplace.

"We slept on pieces of cardboard in doorways and balconies," Pedro said.

Sometimes there would be fights, or friends would be arrested and taken to a jail "where they'd shoot you if you try to run away."

"I was playing astronaut one day," Luis said, "when a big guy came up and said: 'I want to be the head astronaut.' Then he stabbed me in the leg."

Both boys said they are glad they came to the Club Michin. "We have food and clothes here and a place to sleep," Pedro said.

They go to school now and have hope for the future. Pedro wants to be an auto mechanic.

"I'm going to be a scientist," Luis said. "I'll have to work very hard."

THEY SURVIVE IN ANY WAY THEY CAN

Democracy Comes Hard To a Divided Ethiopia

By COLIN LEGUM
The Observer

The immediate questions facing Ethiopia are whether its present government, led by Lij Endalkatchew Makonnen, can survive for much longer and, if it falls, who would take over.

Makonnen was said at the time of his appointment as Prime Minister four months ago to be "the Army's choice". It has since become clear that he was chosen only by one section of the Army — mainly the paratroopers and by some of the less radical officers in the other units. Makonnen, an able young diplomat with ministerial expericence and the son of a former Prime Minister, has really had little opportunity to show whether he is capable of fulfilling his mandate to carry out immediate reforms which he undertook to do when he was appointed by Emperor Haile Selassie last March.

He is the only member of the last government to retain office. All his former colleagues are in detention pending inquiries into their financial affairs and their role in dealing with the devastating drought in Wollo and Tigrai. On the face of it, all the charges levelled against Makonnen's former colleagues should apply equally against himself. The fact that he is the only exception makes him vulnerable to all kinds of charges; it also lays him open to pressures by his opponents.

Loyalty Lacking

His Cabinet was chosen primarily to produce a team of ministers who would win some degree of acceptability in the country. But they hardly work together as a team. There is little sense of loyalty among them, and even less agreement on political principles. Nor is any of them safe. The former Foreign Minister, Menassie Haile, resigned and is now detained. So are the former Minister of Defence, General Abiye, and the former Minister of Justice — who, incidentally, was one of the leading radicals in the attempted coup against the Emperor in 1960. The influential Minister of the Interior, Kajazmatch Zewde Gabre Selassie, was switched to the Foreign Ministry where he has less authority.

Even if the Prime Minister were a tough and dynamic leader he would be in trouble. He has no power base of his own, other than the support he gets from some elements in the Army. He has no independent authority, having to manoeuvre politically both within his Cabinet and in his dealings with the Emperor. And he has continuously to face the challenge of his Parliament — an unrepresentative body of MPs. They are not themselves much cleaner than those they condemn. He must constantly yield to the pressures of dominant groups within the Army.

The Army says it has grown impatient because of the failure to implement the reforms which it demands. Having remained patient for centuries, these spokesmen for the Ethiopians now feel frustrated because fundamental changes have not been agreed in a matter of months. This sense of urgency reflects not only a mood of radicalism among some sections of the Army, but also reflects a deep fear that delays will be used to restore the power of the old establishment. Hence the arrests of the older conservative leaders and the pressures for immediate reforms.

At the top of the list of reforms is the adoption of a new constitution which was promised last March to be ready within six months. The three constitutional commissions appointed by Parliament have submitted their proposal and the Cabinet has submitted its views on their proposals. The various drafts are now being argued over, with the Emperor as the mediator.

The central change affects the transformation of the Emperor into a constitutional monarch. Everybody, including the Emperor, accepts this change in principle. But what will it mean in practice? The immediate testing point — and the main point of dispute — is over who appoints the Prime Minister: the constitutional monarch of Parliament?

The Parliamentary commissions were unanimous that the Prime Minister should be nominated by Parliament, although they disagreed as to the method by which Parliament should make its choice. The Cabinet, on the other hand, wants the monarch to present his nominations for Prime Minister to Parliament for its approval.

Who Qualifies?

Two immediate questions need to be answered. First, who qualifies to be considered as a Prime Minister? If it is to be the leader of the majority party that would require the introduction of a multi-party political system in a country that has never known political parties in all its history. The radicals are demanding this reform. On the other hand, if it is agreed to establish a single-party State, then the ruling party would nominate its leader. The so-called moderates think it is more practical to create a single-party State.

A third view — backed by a majority in the Cabinet — is that in the next stage there should be no parties at all, and that Parliament should be elected on a "best man" basis, as at present.

The second question is over what kind of Parliament to have. At present the country has a bicameral system. The Senate is entirely chosen by the Emperor and can override the elected Assembly. But while the Assembly is elected on a basis of universal franchise, the old system of Imperial and local patronage makes it difficult in many areas (though not everywhere) to get effective democratic representation. The MPs tend to represent the landlords as opposed to tenants; and there are no peasants as such.

There is, therefore, an urgent need for a proper democratic parliament which cannot be bought, as elements in the present parliament are known to have been in the past. But will parliament be as keen to cleanse itself as it is to purge former ministers and senior officials?

Another crucial reform priority is over land policy. This has been the most popular source of grievance in the countryside and is one of the main issues pressed by the radicals.

"Land for the tillers" is the popular slogan. But to implement such a policy means, in effect, the expropriation of land from the Amhara dominators, who took over the lands of the Gallas and of other southern groups when they were conquered by Menelik in the last century. The numerous Gallas have for long been unhappy with the distribution of power and privilege in Ethiopia; getting their land back is basic to their claims for justice.

MAKONNEN . . . in the middle

Economic measures to halt the inflationary pressures and to enable wage-earners to live, are perhaps the most important immediate challenge. So far, despite promises, the new government has done very little in this sector except to give in to those groups whose capacity to exercise pressure has been greatest. The lion's share has gone to the soldiers themselves and they are now embarrassed by having to face charges that, having "eaten from the meal cooked by others," they are now on the side of "law and order" against the workers and peasants.

With the best will in the world it is difficult to see how any government can introduce economic reforms so speedily that it can satisfy the most urgent demands. But what the radicals demand is a program that clearly establishes how the wealth of the country is to be expanded and redistributed.

Meanwhile their attention is focused on those who are felt to have done well in the past. Hence the pressures for the beginning of an inquiry into the affairs of literally hundreds of former Ethiopian leaders as a prelude to proper legal proceedings against them on grounds of supposed corruption and maladministration, as in the affair of the drought.

HELP FOR THE TRAVELLER

THE GLOBE AND MAIL
An Editorial

There is no doubt that this is a very large country and that many of its citizens know only their part of it and that few know all parts of it. Canada's Commissioner of Official Languages, Keith Spicer, believes that this ignorance of each other is a factor standing in the way of enthusiastic acceptance of bilingualism by many Canadians. He suggested at the spring convocation of Glendon College, York University, a number of programs to enable Canadians to move around and get acquainted. One program was actually for that neglected group — adults who are not pensioners and therefore not of an age to benefit from travel programs to aid youth and age.

★ ★ ★

"I think," said Mr. Spicer, "the federal government should subsidize Air Canada, the CN, CP Air, the CPR and major buslines to entitle every Canadian to a 50 to 75 per cent fare reduction once a year on trips over 1,500 or 2,000 miles. Almost inevitably, this would help hundreds of thousands of citizens to meet and better appreciate many Canadians of the other language group."

In this period of inflation, we cannot approve subsidies. But need there be subsidies to make a real start on such a program?

Why could the government not require airlines, railways and bus lines to make available to all Canadians the reduced fares now available to youth and age? A plane, a train, a bus travels at no more cost when it travels full than when it travels partly empty. The company, in fact, gains if it is full. It has the full fares it would have got anyway, and it has — as gravy — the reduced fares of people who would otherwise not travel.

The system would have to be applied without any reservations of space. The traveller who wanted the reduced rate would have to go to the airport or depot and take his chances on finding an empty seat when all full-fare passengers had gone aboard. But the machinery is already in place for young travellers. It would only have to be used more extensively.

★ ★ ★

The system could indeed expand travel among those who cannot afford to travel now, could bring Canadians, into relationship with other Canadians, help us to know each other, perhaps indeed increase in many the desire to understand and speak some of the other official language. It would also offer a benefit to that large group of Canadians who now support all the others — the middleaged.

'Use Prisoners to Develop North'

QUARTER CENTURY NEWSLETTER

(An editorial in a publication put out by inmates of Millhaven prison in Ontario)

Approximately once a year, a Member of Parliament will suggest in the House of Commons that inmates in federal institutions be used to develop the Canadian North. Each time, the suggestion is rejected. It was brought up again in November and the Solicitor-General rejected the proposal, saying, "it would not be rehabilitative" or words to that effect.

I wonder if Mr. Allmand knows the history of Australia. It worked there. In Canada, the recividist rate is approximately 80 per cent, so apparently the "rehabilitative" program that is now being used is a complete failure, or at least an 80 per cent failure. It is also an expensive failure as the budget for the Penitentiary Service this year, as reported in Hansard, was $80,000,000 and there has been an additional $19,000,000 granted, so the total bill being footed by the taxpayer is around $100,000,000 for the fiscal year.

It was reported in the newspapers that over one-half million dollars was paid to the guards in overtime for one month. The penitentiary system is big business, the only trouble is that it is not a success in what it is supposed to be doing.

In Millhaven Maximum Security Prison, inmates are never allowed to come into contact physically with their wives or children through open visits. Men go for years without being allowed to hold their children or kiss their wives! This is supposed to be "rehabilitative"!

If the inmates were used to develop the north, two main objects would be achieved. Society would be protected because the only way in or out would be by plane, so the threat of escape would be eliminated, and the inmate would be forced to work in order to survive. Married men would be allowed to have their families with them and would have no choice but to accept their responsibilities. The inmate would be paid the same rate of pay as that earned by people doing similar work and would pay taxes, like any other citizen. Their punishment for committing crimes would be to be exiled to the north.

Single inmates would live in another part of the north and women would be allowed to take up residence with them. It is unnatural for men to live only with other men for many years . . .

There is presently an oil shortage in Canada, but out in Alberta there are the Athabaska Tar Sands which reportedly hold more oil than all of the Arab countries put together. Prisoners could be used to get the oil out of the ground and solve this shortage.

Instead of sewing mailbags or doing other meaningless tasks for years, for the first time prisoners would be doing something worthwhile and would no longer be a drain on the taxpayer. It should be pointed out that besides the $100,000,000 bill for the penitentiary system, that in many cases welfare is being paid to the prisoner's families . . . There are over 9,000 inmates in federal institutions, many of whom are very talented men. Practically every trade in existence could be filled by these men with proper leadership . . .

If, someday, Canada does use prisoners to develop either the Far North or the Athabaska Tar Sands, the penitentiary service would no longer be required, which would cause some unemployment, but the men in the Far North, who would be taxpayers then, would use their influence as taxpayers on behalf of their ex-keepers and help them negotiate a contract with the Post Office so that they could be hired to sew mailbags.

WEYERHAEUSER CANADA LTD.

Ronald D. Nelson

The appointment of Ronald D. Nelson C.A. R.I.A. as vice-president finance and administration and treasurer for Weyerhaeuser Canada Ltd. was announced today by Thomas G. Rust, chairman and chief executive officer.

Mr. Nelson has held senior positions with the forest products industry in British Columbia as well as with major international manufacturing companies.

In his new position he will be responsible for all aspects of the financial and administrative functions of Weyerhaeuser and, as a member of the management team, will be involved in the future development of the company in Canada.

Mr. Nelson will be located at the executive offices in Vancouver. Weyerhaeuser presently has pulp and sawmill operations in British Columbia, Ontario and Quebec. ***

Oil Executive's Word Sparks Tougher Laws

HALIFAX (CP) — Premier Gerald Regan of Nova Scotia likes to credit an oil industry executive with fathering his government's tough petroleum legislation.

As he tells it, the official's testimony before the province's Public Utilities Board last winter startled him and he set out to toughen legislation.

Four months after A. Phelps Bell, Imperial Oil Ltd.'s manager of petroleum products co-ordination, made his statement to the board the legislature passed two bills: one on price regulations and another dealing with allocation of products during emergencies.

Regan quoted Bell in the legislature as telling the board members during a hearing on an Imperial Oil price increase that prices are based on what the market will bear; referring to allocation of products, he said that "if the price available in other provinces were better than the price available in Nova Scotia and in the constraint supply situation which the world and Canada are in, it's certainly possible that supplies would move out of the province over a time."

Imperial, Gulf Oil Canada Ltd. and Texaco Canada Ltd., operators of Nova Scotia's three refineries that refine about twice as much fuel as is consumed in the province, are grudgingly preparing to submit to the Gasoline and Fuel Oil Licensing Act.

They say they can live with the legislation here but fear it is a "model" for other provinces.

Quebec and Ontario are reported to be studying the legislation. Jacques Ruellard, spokesman for Quebec's natural resources minister Gilles Masse, said this week that, "In general, we are very interested in this tool with which Nova Scotia has supplied itself."

"What this legislation does in effect is control our industry like a public utility, but without an assured rate of return," said Jack Carey, manager of corporate affairs for Gulf in the Atlantic provinces, before the legislature's law amendments committee last month.

Smarting from the reaction to Bell's testimony, Trevor Housser, Imperial's Atlantic region director, was more conciliatory.

"We think it's redundant with federal legislation, but it's our intention to co-operate as well as we can."

A bill past last December allowed oil comapnies to alter gasoline and fuel oil prices, but required a statement specifying the reasons for changes. The Public Utilities Board was empowered to order a hearing to determine if the changes were justified. Three hearing were held this spring and Imperial Oil was ordered to roll back its increase in the price of heavy fuel oil.

The company said it is appealing the order before the courts.

Oil companies argued that the new bill would mean a "horrendous" amount of paper moving between its offices and the board because of the number of price fluctuations.

The legislation will prohibit oil companies from raising the price of gasoline or fuel oil beyond what it was last Dec. 13, without approval of the utilities board. All price changes, increases and decreases, must be reported to the board which will decide whether a hearing is warranted. The four-member board has the power to approve price changes, maintain the existing price or order a reduction.

Gulf suggested setting a maximum price for each product and permitting the industry to compete within this structure.

The legislature's law amendments committee ignored the objects and passed the bill with a few administrative amendments.

A companion act to allow the government power to maintain a normal level of products in the province during emergencies, is required to control balky companies that might want to ship their products out of a low-yield market, says Premier Regan.

The industry argues that both bills are redundant. Ottawa, it arguess, already has ample legislation to control prices and allocation of products.

But Premier Regan told the legislature that it was possible to conceive of a situation in which oil companies might wish to take action detrimental to Nova Scotia which might no be consitlered important enough to provoke federal response.

However, he told the legislature, Bell's testimony to the board last February was revealing and is an overriding reason for the legislation.

"Our philosophy is that which is embodied in these bills and that is that the public interest is no longer served by giving the market system free rein over the allocation of petroleum products and that petroleum products are something special.

Mill Plans Revealed

VANCOUVER (CP) — A MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. spokesman announced that his company and a spanish firm have discussed the minority participation of the foreign company in a New Brunswick subsidiary of MacMillan Bloedel.

The spokesman said a proposal which would give the Instituto National De Industria a minority share in MacMillan Rothesay Ltd. has been drafted, but is subject to the approval of the MacMillan Bloedel board of directors and the Spanish government of Generalissimo Francisco Franco.

MacMillan Rothesay operates a newsprint mill in Saint John, N.B. Further details of the scheme were unavailable.

Spain Buys Denison Uranium

TORONTO (CP) — Denison Mines Ltd. of Toronto has agreed to sell four million pounds of uranium to Empressa Nacional del Uranio SA of Madrid, Spain, Denison chairman Stephen B. Roman announced Monday.

He said in a release deliveries will be made during a four-year period beginning in late 1974. Terms of the sale were not announced but a substantial advance payment is involved.

ROLL PROFITS RISING FAST

EDMONTON (CP) — A batch of Scottish rolls prepared to test the mark earlier this year rose to full-scale business proportions for John Brownlie and Ian McGlashan.

Brownlie, 30, of Sherwood Park, just east of Edmonton, came to Canada from Scotland in late 1972. In Edmonton, he met McGlashan, 31, a baker, who arrived in Canada in 1967.

The two men decided that with an estimated 15,000 first-generation scots in the city, there was room for a bakery specializing in Scotland's native rolls and pastries. They formed a partnership to provide such a service.

To test their idea, they whipped up a batch of Scottish rolls with the help of another baker and served them at a Scottish society function.

The response was heartening. As the demand for Scottish rolls spread by word of mouth, the two men set up a home delivery system using two stationwagons. They divided the city into sections and services their respective districts once a week.

Initial demand for the rolls was 270 dozen. By early April it had risen to 600 dozen and by the end of that month Brownlie estimated the demand was about 1,000 dozen for June.

While they worked to meet the initial demand, both men were still holding down regular jobs. McGlashan was a baker at the Argyll Co-Op while Brownlie was employed in the Ethylene Division of Canadian Industries Ltd. (CIL).

The latter was producing and packaging scottish rolls from 6 A.M. to just before noon, then doffing his baker's cap to put in an eight-hour shift at CIL.

After the initial success of their pilot projects, the men used $1,500 as down payment on $6,000 worth of ovens and equipment, quit their regular wage-earning jobs in April, and set up a bakery shop under the name of Edmonton's Original Scottish Bakers Ltd.

They intend to retain their home-delivery service to complement the shop. "It's one of our major selling points," Brownlie said in a rich Scottish brogue.

Consumer Guardian Appointed

A Vancouver chartered accountant has been appointed the third member of the consumer services task force on prepaid contracts for future goods and services.

William Kinsey was named by Consumer Services Minister Phyllis Young to work with Vancouver Better Business Bureau executive vice-president Vincent Forbes and Vancouver Consumer Action League member Shelley Rivkin, named to the task force earlier.

The task force, which has been asked to prepare its report and recommendations by Oct. 15, will look into the practices of weight reducing salons, dance lesson outlets, health spas, computer dating services, door-to-door sellers of magazine subscriptions and food freezer plans.

The group will investigate the financing arrangements for such prepaid schemes and the involvement of manufacturers and suppliers in the service contracts.

If you Don't own the place you call "home", you could be in a heap of trouble!

Every Time You Buy A Loaf Of Bread Or A Quart Of Milk, A Pair Of Shoes, or any other necessity of life, you feel the impact of inflation.

What About The Biggest Necessity Of Life?
The cost of keeping a decent roof over your head. The necessity that takes the biggest part of your income. The one that's probably going to hurt more than all the others combined as inflation accelerates. How much more is "home" going to cost you next year? In two years? In five? Think about it.

The Time To Protect Yourself Is Now.
If you don't own the place you call home, you're at the mercy of inflation. The cost of renting has to at least keep pace with the cost of living. So every day you rent, you're unprotected. The smart thing is to make a move to protect yourself. Immediately.

When You Own, You're In Control.
The way to insure that the cost of keeping a decent roof over your head doesn't get completely out of control is to become an owner. This way you assure yourself that the mortgage payments you make each month will remain the same for the term of the mortgage. No ups, no increases. In short, when you own, you're in control.

Once You've Decided To Buy, Buy Smart.
If there is any one rule to follow when buying real estate, it is to always look for these three things — location, location and location!

And don't let high interest stop you. 1% higher interest on a $25,000 Loan costs only $208.00 a year. The value of our self-owned apartments will increase ten times that each year.

Racing: When Longden Rode Winner '6,000'

VANCOUVER — It was nine years ago next month jockey Johnny Longden was the toast of the horse-racing world at Exhibition Park. The then 58-year old Longden became the first jockey to win 6,000 races, a record he eventually boosted to a lifetime mark of 6,032, and which since has been surpassed by Bill Shoemaker, who is still active, and still winning.

On Saturday, "The Thumper," a little greyer, now 67, and a trainer, was back in town for the ninth running of the "Johnny Longden 6,000". When he jumped on the scales, he weighed out about "seven pounds over"; and if there was only perfunctory hand-clapping when he was introduced this time, that's horse racing. Only winners count. Guests are to be admired and reminisced about.

Which brings up the night of Aug. 16, 1965. That was Longden's night to remember, and one that B.C. Jockey Club publicity director Harry Filion won't forget for a lifetime either.

With Longden heading toward the magic winning figure of "6000" there had been the invitation from the B.C. Jockey Club, Jack Diamond, et al, to come to Vancouver for the big event. Because after all, wasn't Longden a Canadian, and it would be only fitting to do his trick here? Hadn't he done much to make B.C. and B.C.'s most famous horse, George Royal noteworthy by riding him to victory in the $125,000 San Juan Capistrano Handicap at Santa Anita? And so on . . . It was a "natural".

The Prince . . . 'Won Driving'

So Johnny had said "glad to", and had duly arrived amid the usual fanfare, press conferences, TV exposure, and needing but four winners to crack the magical number.

It was figured that Saturday could be the big day, but no such luck. When racing ended on Aug. 14, Longden was still one shy. Thus it was that Monday, over 9,000 fans showed up in the hope they could say "I was there". Longden's best bet that night appeared to be in the second race, his first mount. He was up on Star Pal, a sprinter, and logical favorite. But fate played a cruel hand. Star Pal was no pal. He bucked in the starting gate, hit Longden in the mouth, and shattered his teeth. Finally, he finished out of the money.

It was a similar story in the fifth. Big Clint, with Longden up, faded to finish fifth.

Then came what was to be the historic event — the sixth. And in the words of the form chart:

"Prince Scorpion won driving . . ."

Longden had reached 6,000 winners on Prince Scorpion with a three-quarter-length victory. His wife, Hazel, his daughter and two sons were there along with Premier Bennett, several dignitaries and a flock of cameramen. This was an occasion to be preserved for posterity.

Why not? It had taken Longden 38 years — he had ridden his first winner at Salt Lake City in 1927, his only winner that year; he had suffered through assorted breaks — both arms, both collar bones, both legs, both feet, his back all his ribs; and this was his 31,966th mount.

(The next spring, he was to ride George Royal to yet another triumph in the San Juan Capistrano, a nose victory after a stretch-long duel. It was after that race he announced his retirement.)

Picture is Great . . . But?

But back to the track, because even the best-laid plans of mice and men don't always pan out, and on Longden's big day it was no exception. The story can now be told.

Oh, sure, Longden got a shiny red motorcycle from the B.C. Jockey Club, which he promptly jumped on and rode around the track to the jockey's room; but before that even, there were all those photographers, including Filion, doing their thing.

Let's face it. This was track history. A quick sell. Many pictures were shot, processed and dispatched to various newspapers and turf publications. As official track photographer, Filion had taken more than a few.

Some were very good, others better, but one stood out above all the rest. It was good of Premier Bennett, and Arthur Foulkes; Prince Scorpion was looking down the lens; all the dignitaries were smiling; and so Harry shipped it off to Blueblood and other similar publications. Post haste.

Naturally pleased with himself, his big promotion done, and an unqualified success, he awaited the next issue of the mags, the better to admire his handicraft.

But alas, back came the message, to wit: "Picture great . . . but where's the star?"

Sometime during the post-race festivities, Longden had sneaked away, and wasn't included in the otherwise classic photo. "I guess he had gone to weigh out," Filion confessed Saturday, telling the story on himself.

Oh yes, a suitable replacement photo was soon dispatched," he explained. "But you can imagine how I felt."

And so, if Longden will probably never forget the day he joined the "6,000 club," neither will Filion.

Both have moments to remember.

A Personal Triumph for Jackson

SITDOWN STRIKE? Not really. This is one of the strengthening drills San Diego Charger rookies are going through at camp while National Football League veterans continue their strike this week. (AP Wirephoto).

Times News Services

The votes are in and finalized for major league baseball's 45th annual all-star game and the march to the polls was a personal triumph for Reggie Jackson of Oakland Athletics.

And Steve Garvey of the Los Angeles Dodgers, a write-in candidate, didn't do badly.

Jackson, leading seven returnees to the American League team, received the nod of 3,497,358 fans, the highest in history. A record 6,545,712 votes were cast.

The poll humbled the oft-outspoken outfielder. "It's great to get more votes than Henry Aaron or Johnny Bench, and to be recognized by the people," said Jackson when informed of his total.

Aaron, the majors' all-time home run king with Atlanta Braves, and Bench, Cincinnati Reds' capable catcher, led the National League vote-collectors, each getting more than 2.5 million.

But Garvey overshadowed the popular greats with his write-in success to earn a starting spot at first base for the July 23 game at Pittsburgh.

Not listed on the printed ballot, Garvey edged Tony Perez of Cincinnati 1,082,489 to 1,059,611 for the first-base job. The last write-in candidate to win was outfielder Rico Carty of Atlanta in 1970.

Reserves and pitchers will be named later this week by Yogi Berra, manager of the New York Mets and NL skipper, and California's Dick Williams, the AL pilot.

On the field, Cincinnati's continuing success highlighted Monday's action. The Reds, 10½ games behind Los Angeles in the NL's Western Division less than a week ago, are charging. They crept to within 7½ games of the Dodgers by blanking St. Louis Cardinals 3-0 for their ninth victory in the last 11 games.

Elsewhere, Pittsburgh snapped Houston's six-game unbeaten run with a 3-1 victory while Chicago Cubs scored four times in the ninth inning to defeat Atlanta 7-3.

In the American, tears were shed for rookie pitcher Wayne Garland of Baltimore Orioles. He went into the ninth inning with a no-hitter and a 4-1 lead but Oakland scored five times to pull out a 6-4 victory.

In other games, Nolan Ryan won his 11th as California defeated Cleveland Indians 4-2; Kansas City nipped Boston Red Sox 3-2; Chicago White Sox beat Detroit Tigers 3-2, and Minnesota Twins edged Milwaukee Brewers 4-3. (Linescores, standings on Page 11.)

Another Exhibition Threatened by Strike

By The Associated Press

The National Football League players' strike, having already stopped the college all-star game, may claim another contest before the week is out.

Roy Jefferson and Brig Owens met with Washington rookies at the Redskins' Carlisle, Pa., camp Monday and tried to convince them not to play any exhibition games, including a rookie scrimmage Friday night, which the Redskins' striking players say they'll picket.

"The fact that the game is scheduled at RFK Stadium in Washington and that they're charging money for tickets tells me the game is an exhibition game," said Jefferson.

"If we can stop this game, it might set a precedent so other teams won't have them until this thing is settled."

— Ed Garvey, executive director of the NFL Players Association, John Thompson, executive director of the NFL Management Council, and James Scearce, the federal mediator, arent expected to meet in Washington until Friday.

Bill Curry of Houston Oilers, president of the players' association, said Monday:

"If we can't reach an agreement in six to eight weeks, there's something seriously wrong."

"If there has been a change in the mood of the players and owners, I think it is that both sides have now shown they are both adamant about their stands and that the price is high for both sides to demonstrate," Curry said.

While some training camps had no veterans reporting, Cincinnati Bengals had a dozen players and Houston Oilers had 10 vets.

Tight end Bob Trumpy and linebacker Al Beauchamp were among the Bengals working out. Quarterback Greg Cook also worked out Sunday — but Monday he walked out, not because of the strike but apparently because he felt he just couldn't make the team.

Bombers Revive; Lions Grab Moro

Times News Services

Walt McKee provided 12 points with three field goals and three converts and a sputtering offense finally jelled in the second half to carry Winnipeg Blue Bombers to a 30-15 Western Football Conference exhibition victory over Saskatchewan Roughriders at Winnipeg on Monday.

It was Winnipeg's first win in three pre-season games.

Mike Dirks, Brian Jack and John Bledsoe scored 'Peg majors while Steve Mazurak and Mel Easley counted Rider touchdowns. Brian Berg converted both Saskatchewan majors and Ralph Galloway added a single on a missed field goal attempt.

Saskatchewan quarterbacks Randy Mattingley, Jim Lindsey and Ron Lancaster completed 15 of 31 passes while Don Jonas and Ralph Brock of Winning were good on 10 of 18 tries.

There was action off the field as well.

B.C. Lions completed a straight one-for-one trade with Hamilton Tiger-Cats of the Eastern Conference, obtaining veteran tight end Tony Moro in exchange for defensive end Bubba Bridges.

Moro is not expected to play for Lions tonight when they meet Toronto Argonauts in B.C.'s final pre-season game at Vancouver.

In another deal, Winnipeg traded rookie imports Wayne Dorton, a guard, and Brent Myers, a tackle, to Calgary for "future considerations."

Odd Alibis But on Time

Smooth is the word for the first-round running of the Victoria Times Public Parks Tennis Tournament.

With the exception of one or two matches that had to be defaulted because players had either moved away or couldn't play for various reasons, all first-round results were in by the July 13 deadline.

Some of the result lines were a little varied - most played stipulated one pro set up to nine games but some played the best-of-three sets or just one set to six one couple even played a set that ended at 5-2.

One man, responsible for sending back the postcard with the result added a footnote that, although he lost 9-5, he was 52 and his opponent was 18. It wasn't quite true. A check showed the opponent was, in fact, 22 but there was still a 30-year gap.

Another player who had written on his entry sheet that he would like to compete in the "Fat Men's Singles" must have found his slim opponent a bit much for him - he lost 9-4.

Postcards will be sent out this week informing players of their next opponents and the draw for second-round matches will be published in Wednesday's Times.

First-round results:

MEN'S

Matt Bates defeated Alan Hamilton 9-7; Jim Temple defeated Dave Prette 9-0; Ken Lee defeated Jack Dallimore 9-5; Roland Maier defeated Bill Schmuck 9-2; Greg Booth defeated Ron Kostiuk 9-2; Henry Hohlnicoff defeated Norman Steingold 9-1; Dennis Ferrill defeated Robert Willey 9-4; Jose Mandap defeated Gordon Lindsay 9-6; Steve Quan defeated Chris Tyrrell 9-1; Gary Lokken defeated Don Proctor 9-2; Ron Frederick defeated M. S. Larocque 9-0; Larry Mais defeated John Sullivan 9-2; Alfred Hass defeated Murray Dickson 9-4; Ian Scott defeated Paul Scott 6-1, 6-4; Gordon Greer defeated Larry Hodgson 6-0, 6-0; Peter Wyle defeated Steve Baker 9-2; Charlie Becker defeated Michael Martay 9-8; Don Wilson defeated Neil Isbister 2-6, 6-4, 6-3; Darcy Corregan defeated Mal Finch 6-1, 6-0; Ray Troyer defeated Kevin May 9-2; Ken Cameron defeated Ron Maxymyshyn 8-7; Rick Fuller defeated Doug Horton 6-0, 3-6, 6-4; Daniel Ramage defeated Phil Stephen by default; Tony Sanh defeated Knud Mikkelson 5-2; Dwayne Robinson defeated Clarence Corbin 9-3.

WOMEN'S

Mike's Lefty Ties For Pitching Lead

Southpaw Mel Nelson tied Bill Polz of Century Inn in the victory department as Mike's Sports Shop blanked Seaboard Construction 2-0 in Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League action Monday at Central Park.

Shut out for the second straight game on three hits, Seaboard dropped out of the league lead by a matter of .006 percentage points.

It was Nelson's 11th victory against six losses. Nelson also became the workhorse of the league by running his innings-worked total to 112. Pols, 11-2, has worked 105 and one-third innings.

SCENIC Lake Cowichan area serves as backdrop for Ernie Tate's lessons at nine-hole March Meadows Golf Club at Honeymoon Bay. Veteran professgirls' classes are largest on Island.

Tate's Route in Golf An Economic Adventure

GOLF

HONEYMOON BAY — There are two ways to build a golf course.

Route No. 1, and surprisingly popular with most architects, is to zip open the pocketbook, go full speed ahead and damn the accountants.

Route No. 2 is Ernie Tate's way: Study and understand the available terrain, work with and not against Mother Nature, and proceed with economic diplomacy.

The Tate system is working out well for March Meadows. Nestled in a picturesque corner near the shores of Lake Cowichan, it's alive and well and on its way to becoming one of the more delightful nine-hole courses on Vancouver Island.

Since April, and without relying on high-priced help, professional-architect-greenskeeper Tate has installed two main spurs of an underground watering system, rebuilt some greens, and has found time to set up a six-hole children's course. The tab hasn't hurt anyone except money-lenders.

But the man and not the course is Honeymoon Bay's greatest golf asset. The veteran professional has a reputation as being one of the finest Canadian-bred teachers of golf.

He's the man who gets credit from Dale Shaw for supplying the Victoria women's champion with helpful technical refinement. And while it's nice to have a champion in the stable, more impressive is the interest that Tate has been stirring around Lake Cowichan.

His junior girls' classes had an enrollment of 38. Last year, and before Ernie arrived on the scene, March Meadows' junior girls' membership was two.

Tate counts "about 20" boys as regulars.

"The boys disappoint me," he said. "Basics they haven't got, swelled heads they have . . . "

But it isn't in Tate's makeup to pussyfoot or plead for attention. If they're not interested in golf, he's not interested in them.

Tate's junior program flows against today's inflationary floods. Youngsters who attend the regular Saturday classes, including three who commute 66 miles from Victoria to Honeymoon Bay, are charged only 50 cents. Regular attendance is Tate's only stipulation.

Tate sees none of the money. "It's theirs," he says. The fees are channelled into a junior fund supervised by Phyllis Way and Sharon Carpenter. The modest fund may be used to buy prizes or pay any other expense incurred by "interested youngsters."

Modestly, Tate says "Sharon and Phyllis deserve all the credit. They set up the program and did all the work. I'm just keeping it going . . . "

And he's doing that very well.

Winner of the Pacific Northwest Assistants' championship for three years while he served his apprenticeship at Marine Drive in Vancouver, Tate's first venture in golf construction was to lay out the Powell River course.

He had pro-shop stands at the Fraserview and Vancouver Golf Clubs before moving to Calgary and a 16-year stay at Earl Grey. Despite his teaching reputation, Tate admitted his preference was with building.

"After the family had grown up in Calgary, I thought it was time to make my move," he said. "I left Earl Grey with the idea of building courses."

He started several nine-holers in Alberta, and helped renovate one that proved his theory that "things can be done without money."

A few years ago, the small course in Nanton became extremely busy because it drew golfers from nearby Calgary. With an eye on continued success, the club president moved for a change from sand to grass greens.

"Can we do it without great expense?" he asked Tate.

"I can do it for next to nothing," replied Ernie.

That was a lie. Nanton got its grass greens but had to declare a profit for making the change under Tate's supervision.

"We sold the loam we dug up," chuckled Tate. "Not only did it pay for everything, but the club was able to deposit $3,300 into the bank."

Three Stay Alive

Central Saanich, Triangle and American remained alive in the three Greater Victoria area Little League baseball playoffs with victories Monday.

Central Saanich eliminated Oak Bay 10-2, Triangle ousted Layritz 8-5 and American scuttled Hampton, 5-2.

In games scheduled for 6:30 tonight, National plays Beacon Hill at Hollywood Park, Sidney takes on Lake Hill at Hampton Park and Gordon Head faces Esquimalt-Vic West at Lampson Street Park.

Winners will advance to the district playoffs starting Saturday at Allenby Park while the losers will face the Monday winners on Wednesday night to determine which other three teams advance.

BRENTWOOD EIGHT MISSES BY THREE

BURNABY — Brentwood College missed out and the coxed four from St. Catharines, Ont., was the only crew to qualify Monday for the Canadian youth rowing squad in a special time trial held at Burnaby Lake.

The special qualifying session was held because the crews were rowing into a 10 m.p.h. wind in the weekend trials.

The Brentwood eights crew finished with a time of 4:36, which was better than the old qualifying time of 4:38 but was three seconds short of the new time required for the world championships, to be held in Hatzburg, Germany, Aug. 1-4.

St. Catharines was second to Brentwood in the eights but won the four without cox, the coxed pairs and singles Sunday.

And on Monday night, St. Catharines' coxed four bettered the Canadian standard by about five seconds. But a double sculls crew from Quebec failed to meet the national mark.

The addition of the coxed four brings the total Canadian contingent for the world championships to 20, including officials. It is dominated by Ontario rowers and officials. The squad, which leaves for Germany Wednesday, has three St. Catharines' crews and one crew — pair without cox — from the Argonaut Rowing Club of Toronto.

Shamrock Ambition: Snap Tie

When Victoria Shamrocks tackle Vancouver Burrards at 8 Wednesday night at Memorial Arena, they will be hoping to break a Western Lacrosse Association third-place tie with Coquitlam Adanacs.

The Rocks couldn't do it in Vancouver Monday night, when the Burrards opened the gap between them and Victoria and Coquitlam to eight points by winning 13-10.

And over in Coquitlam, New Westminster Salmonbellies clinched first place by dropping the Adanacs 16-12.

The Shamrocks trailed 5-1 after the first period but came back to tie it 8-8 after two periods and went ahead 9-8 early in the final period. But then the Burrards took over.

Ranjit Dillon had a fine game for the Rocks, scoring three goals and adding two assists.

New Westminster hammered in seven third-period goals to put the game out of reach for the Adanacs. Paul Parnell, Jim Grady, Bill Mosdell and Jim Giles all scored three goals for the winners.

Ruth All-Stars Stop Greaves

Senior Babe Ruth All-Stars handed Greaves Movers a third straight loss Monday night and knocked the Victoria Senior Amateur Baseball League club out of first place.

Terry Painter scattered five hits to pick up the pitching win and scored the winning run on a wild pitch as All-Stars topped Greaves 3-2 at Lambrick Park.

The loss left Greaves nine percentage points behind Farmer Construction.

Painter came in with the winning run in the bottom of the seventh inning when he singled, stole second, went to third on a pair of walks and scored a wild pitch by Terry Karpiuk, who suffered his second loss in eight decisions.

Dave Morgan connected for a homer in the fifth inning to tie the game for Greaves after All-Stars had gone ahead in the third on George Lomas' two-run homer.

Vicettes Win On One-Hitter

Colleen Burns hurled a one-hitter Monday to pace CJVI Vicettes to a 15-0 shutout over Esquimalt Combos in a Victoria Senior Women's Softball League game Monday at Hyacinth Park.

In other games, played at Royal Athletic Park, MacDonald's Furniture nipped Ingraham Hotel 10-9 and CAV Electronics hammered View Royal, 17-8.

Sandy Ferguson hit a home run and Rosemary Fuller tagged a triple for Vicettes. Vivian Hersen had three hits for MacDonalds.

Shirley Smith picked up the pitching win for MacDonalds.

Heather Benge, two-for-two including a two-run homer, and Kay Kaminski, two-for-three, led Electronics while Kathy Newell chipped in a solo homer and Karen Thompson chalked up the pitching victory.

The Lesser Lights Brightest in Golf

VANCOUVER — A 12-woman golf team from Vancouver showed greatest strength "at the bottom of the batting order" and successfully retained the Huntting Cup at the weekend.

Vancouver defeated Victoria 24½-11½ in the annual inter-city women's team competition.

Vancouver's last seven golfers on the team compiled 17 out of a possible 21 points.

Dorothy DeGirolamo of Gorge Vale and Glen Meadows' Peggy Jacobsen were the only Victorians to sweep all three points from Mainland rivals.

Juanita Turner of Gorge Vale claimed two points while Margaret Todd of Victoria managed a 1½-1½ draw. Victoria City champion Dale Shaw of Glen Meadows was beaten 2½-½ by Gail Harvey Moore in the No. 1 match played at Marine Drive.

Shirley Naysmith of Gorge Vale and Uplands' Joan Lawson were the only other players to score points for Victoria.

Former Badminton Star Dead at 72

VANCOUVER (CP) — A member of the British Columbia Sports Hall of Fame, John Edward (Jack) Underhill, died Sunday at the age of 72.

Underhill was a prominent figure in Canadian badminton, holding the B.C. singles title five times and the Canadian mixed doubles title three times, partnered with his wife, Eileen.

Comeback Is Needed

RICHMOND — Vancouver came up with the edge in the opening round of the annual inter-city junior golf team series but Victoria players refuse to discount comeback possibilities.

Vancouver's 10-man junior club defeated Victoria 27½-17½ but the home-and-home series winds up next Sunday at Gorge Vale.

Points are awarded for each winning nine, 18-hole totals and five four-ball matches.

PALMER HAS LEAD

VANCOUVER (CP) — Defending champion Marilyn Palmer of Vancouver finished two strokes over par Monday in opening round of the British Columbia women's amateur golf championship.

Miss Palmer went out in 37 strokes, then played the back nine in 38 for a 75, one stroke in front of Caroline Larsen of Vancouver. Another Vancouver golfer, Billie Bartley, shot an opening 77.

The event is being held at Marine Drive golf course. The 112 women were to play another 18 holes of medal play today before commencing match play Thursday.

Dizzy Dean Hospitalized

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Dizzy Dean, a member of baseball's Hall of Fame, was reported in serious condition in hospital Monday following what his wife described as a severe heart attack.

Dean, 64, had been released from a South Lake Tahoe hospital Sunday, three days after suffering severe chest pains.

Dean pitched for St. Louis Cardinals.

Low Score In Lacrosse

RICHMOND — Surrey Salmonbellies pulled into a third-place tie with Richmond in the Pacific Junior "A" Lacrosse League Monday night by nipping the Roadrunners 5-4.

Darryl McCall snapped a 4-4 tie with a goal midway through the second period and neither team scored again.

Victoria Junior Ties for Second

VANCOUVER — Paul Guille, 15, of Langara scored 80-79—159 to win the B.C. Junior "B" (9-18 handicap) golf championship at McCleery on Monday.

He finished two strokes ahead of a trio that included Dave Anderson of Victoria, 83-78—161. Terry Campbell of Greenacres and Warren McLellan of Glen Eagles also shared second place.

Test Complete

LONDON (REUTER) — England hammered home its superiority over India at the Oval today, completing a 2-0 win in their one-day cricket series to add to an overwhelming 3-0 test triumph.

Time for Peck to Pick Up Pieces

Special to the Times

AKRON, Ohio — David Saville Peck and his Ennerdale racing team of Victoria arrived here today to begin picking up the pieces in time for the next race in the Canadian-American Challenge Cup sports car series.

They have until Aug. 11 to put their Costello-Leyland Group Seven racing car back together following a crash into a safety barrier Sunday in the third race of the Can-Am series at Watkins Glen N.Y.

The mishap, caused when Peck punctured a tire on the debris of a crash just ahead of him during the second lap, forced him out of the race. He still pocketed $600 for his efforts, however.

Aug. 11 is the date of the fourth stop in the series, the Mid-Ohio at Lexington, Ohio, and Peck expects to have little difficulty repairing his car in time.

He hit a guard rail Sunday, rode the top of it for 50 to 60 feet and dropped back onto the track.

"Luckily, the car came down on the right side, m" he said. "There's a cliff on the other side."

Peck cracked his transmission and cuased damage to the rear end and exhaust system when he hit the wall backwards.

"We can borrow a work shop in Akron," he explained. "I also play to talk to the Firestone people about new tires."

Peck got some help from Firestone last year and now he would like a set of Formula One racing tires, which must be imported from England.

Queen Charlottes Rap Forest Firms

SANDSPIT. (CP) — Critics repeatedly told a government committee during the weekend that forest companies are ripping off revenue from Queen Charlotte Island resources.

The British Columbia's standing committee on municipal matters in housing toured the islands during the weekend on the first leg of a trip that will include islands in the northern Gulf of Georgia.

Carey Linde, a Skidegate lawyer, said the islands should be allowed to administer a tree farm licence to get revenue for the sewer, water and other services they need.

Stan Newcombe, chairman of the local improvement district in Port Clements, said MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. barges which leave the islands loaded with timber, should not return empty but with much-needed building supplies.

Minicipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer said Saturday that some change in the municipal status of the Queen Charlotte Islands is contemplated.

"The province will put in money to get the things you want accomplished," he told a meeting of about 30 persons at Masset.

"We are trying to determine what the people on the island prefer. Do you want to retain the ties with the mainland or do you want to be on your own?"

Crux of the problem facing the committee is devising a form of local government for the Queen Charlottes.

The islands now form part of the Skeena-Queen Charlotte Regional District. District officials say, however, that the islands take up a disproportionate amount of their time and money.

They want the government to set up local control of services.

"We are deficient in good water, garbage dumps, hospital care, mental care, sewer systems, recreational facilities, housing, local government," said Linde Sunday at a meeting in Queen Charlotte City.

He said in theory, the Queen Charlottes are integrated with the rest of B.C.

"In fact, however, that integration relates solely to the north-south rip-off flow of the islands' resources," he said.

The tour is similar to one the committee made last year in the Gulf Islands, following which the government introduced the Islands Trust Act. This set up a government authority to oversee developments in those islands.

James Bay Fire Blame Laid

MONTREAL (CP) — Fire Commissioner Cyrille Delage, concluding the inquiry into the destruction last spring of a work site for the James Bay hydroelectric project, said Monday criminal charges should be laid against three persons and possibly against eight others.

Union business agent Yvon Duhamel, 30, has pleaded guilty to six charges of arson and mischief in connection with the March 21 sacking of the LG-2 work site in northern Quebec.

The commissioner said Maurice Dupuis, Michel Mantha and Jean-Paul Page, all union delegates of Local 791 of the International Union of Operating Engineers, must share the same responsibility as Duhamel.

"Evidence at the inquiry, which began March 25, showed the camp's electricity and water supplies were interrupted when Duhamel, a union official at the camp, severed the site's watermain and wrecked the electrical generators with a bulldozer.

"Later, attempts were made to heap all the blame on Yvon Duhamel as though he had acted on his own, on a whim, to the great surprise of his fellow workers," Delage noted.

In fact, said the commissioner, the incidents represented "a concerted effort by those who had control of several locals at the LG-2 site" and had been premeditated.

Victoria-Maui Results Place U.S. Boats First

LAHAINA, Hawaii (CP) — Tinsley Light, a 36-foot sloop from San Francisco, was declared the over-all winner Monday of the Victoria-to-Maui yacht race.

The sloop, skippered by Henry Grandin, arrived here Saturday after a 2,300-mile voyage from Victoria which began June 29. Of the 21 yachts which started the race, 17 had arrived by late Monday night.

Midnight Special, a 39-foot sloop from Seattle took second place, followed by another American sloop, the 44-foot Race Passage. Biscuit Eater, a 39-foot sloop also from Seattle, was fourth.

Of the eight British Columbia yachts entered in the race, three had not finished late Monday.

Naknek of Royal Vancouver Yacht Club was the top Canadian boat, finishing sixth over-all. Namba, also of Royal Vancouver, finished 11th, while another Vancouver yacht, Rana, was 12th. Andante II of Royal Vancouver was 14th and Sea-Ray, also of Vancouver, was 15th.

Sea Wyf, of Esquimalt, Obsession of Royal Victoria Yacht Club and Madhatter of the Royal Vancouver had not crossed the finish line late Monday night. Lucy Alice of Seattle had also not crossed the finish line.

Namu, a 53-foot ketch from Sausalito, Calif., was declared winner of the Division One yachts Sunday. That division is for boats 46 to 61 feet long.

Tinsley Light won the Division Two title for boats 36 to 46 feet. The winner of the Division Three title for boats under 35 feet was still undecided late Monday.

Duncan Earns Babe Ruth Spot

LAKE COWICHAN — Duncan took the rough route to win a berth in the B.C. 15-year-old Babe Ruth baseball championship tournament starting Saturday in Prince George.

The Duncan squad fought through the losers' bracket of the double-loss elimination mid-Island tourney and gained the berth with 7-4 and 6-2 wins over Lake Cowichan at the weekend.

Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids... and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

And most important—this improvement was maintained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, these tests and observations were made on patients with a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. All this was accomplished with a healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a stated cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Satisfaction or your money refunded.

BLACK STRIKES SHUT S. AFRICAN PLANTS

JOHANNESBURG (Reuter) — More than 2,000 blacks stopped working Monday in demands for higher pay in five separate strikes across South Africa.

The biggest stoppage was at a furniture factory near here, where 750 Africans are demanding a 29-cent increase on their hourly wage of 48 cents.

Figures from 1973 indicate the national average monthly income for whites was $716.40 and for blacks $64.80.

In Durban, about 350 laborers walked off the job at a ship-building firm and jeered their company's general director when he offered a 10-cent-an-hour increase in their 46-cent hourly wage, instead of $1.40 raise they were demanding.

Strikers at a gate and fence factory here returned to work after assurances from their management that they would get wage increases; while others at a construction company in the Orange Free State returned after negotiations with a representative from the department of labor.

Tally Alters, Count by Count

VANCOUVER (CP) — The NDP-Liberal battle for election victory in Vancouver-East federal riding continues Wednesday in Vancouver courthouse where County Court Judge Patricia Proudfoot has ordered a judicial recount of the July 8 balloting.

Only 76 votes now separate election night Liberal winner Art Lee, from NDP candidate Paddy Neale, his closest rival and the MP in the last house.

Judge Proudfoot ordered the judicial recount in County Court on Monday after Neale, in an application made by lawyer John Laxton, alleged there were sufficient discrepancies in the tally of votes in the Vancouver-East riding to justify another count of the ballots, this time by a judge.

The county court judge, after hearing an affidavit by Stewart Headley, president of Vancouver-East federal NDP riding association, held that a judicial recount should be conducted.

The recount might continue uninterrupted until possibly Saturday.

Laxton said in the counting of ballots on election night the subsequent official recount done by returning officials three days later showed ballots had been improperly counted, that ballots were improperly rejected and that incorrrect statements of totals were made in election documents.

Wednesday's judicial count will be the third time the ballots have been tallied.

On election night, ballot counting showed Lee with a total of 9,748 and Neale with 9,546, a difference of 202. During the official count made on July 11, Lee came out with 9,688 and Neale with 9,612, a difference of 76 votes.

Headley, in his affidavit, alleged that in a number of polls in Vancouver-East, there were instances where there were more ballots found in the ballot boxes than electors who voted.

In one poll, 175 ballots were found in the box yet the number of electors who voted was 173, he said. In another case, the ballots found in the box totalled 213 but the total number of electors was 211.

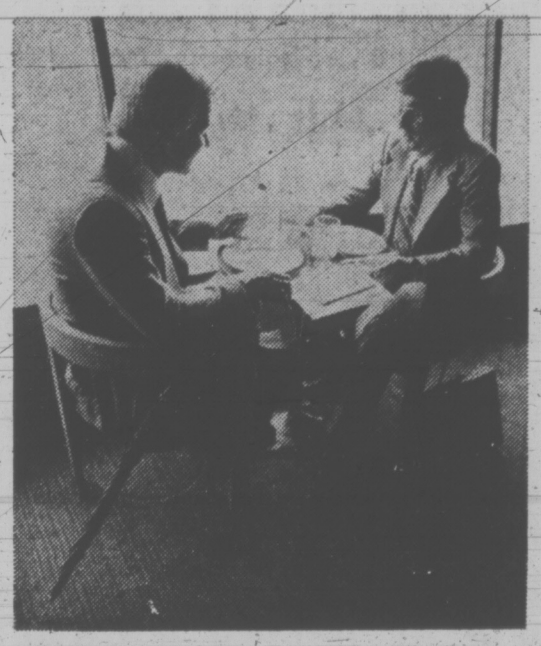
No 1 CUP

THE TRADITIONAL PIMM'S

Mix one measure of Pimm's to three or four measures of carbonated lemonade or lemon-lime. Serve well iced with a slice of lemon and to be truly traditional, a slice of cucumber rind. Pimm's No. 1 is also excellent served with ginger ale or sparkling wines.

... DASHED GOOD!

Sometimes the best place to talk to your Imperial Life man isn't the best place.



Meeting at the office to talk about your insurance program puts a very personal matter in a very business-like setting. And maybe that's not how you like it.

Maybe you'd like to meet with your Imperial Life agent where you feel comfortable enough to discuss every aspect of your family's immediate and future plans. Like at home with your wife. Or over lunch. Or anywhere you feel at ease and free to talk personally.

Because the more you can tell us, the more we can help you.

And that's when you'll notice your Imperial Life man isn't just an insurance salesman. We put him through an extensive training program. We teach him all he has to know about life insurance. And he has on call a team of experts — lawyers, accountants, estate planning specialists.

We continually keep him up-to-date on all the new developments. He can talk with you about Registered Savings Plans. Government pensions. Effective use of your company group benefits. Tax laws.

With re-training programs, seminars and additional courses our agents are constantly learning how to design more effective insurance programs to cover you and your family.

But that's something you'll discover, no matter where you talk.

DRILLS TURN

Coincidence it could have been, but a workman this morning was never more than inches away from a power unit for drilling equipment on a Government Street construction site. The firm's manager and part-owner, Herb Krenbrink, claimed Monday expensive damage was caused to the equipment when Government Street businessmen Don Randle and Jack McKenzie took turns switching off the power because they were miffed at the noise nuisance. Randle went to City Hall Monday but was told by city solicitor Jakob de Villiers Victoria is powerless to stop the drilling noise as it doesn't contravene the city's noise bylaw. Randle, manager of the New England Hotel, complained the noise made sleep impossible for night workers who stay at his establishment. He threatened to cut the switch again today . . . which could explain the presence of that hovering workman.

HEY KIDS! WE'RE HERE TO HELP YOU HAVE FUN!

A summer recreation project for Fernwood area children has found itself short of youngsters.

Recreation Summer '74, a five-man Opportunities for Youth project funded by an $8,100 federal grant, has 15 children in its summer program now but would like to have as many as 60.

The five workers organize hiking, basketball, soccer, swimming and other activities for children from age 8 to 15 every weekday from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

They have taken kids on overnight camping trips, supplying food and tents, and on hiking trips in Thetis Lake Park.

Worker Carol Rathbeber said the group would organize weekend activities as well if any children were interested.

Fernwood area children looking for something to do this summer are invited to join the project by coming to the playground of Victoria High School near the tennis courts, any day between 9:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m.

Parents may also come to discuss the project with the workers, or may phone Carol after 5:30 p.m. at 385-4780. The children pay nothing.

20,000 Added To Voters Lists

At least 20,000 persons have been added to municipal voter lists in Greater Victoria following recent enumerations using new eligibility requirements.

The total could pass 30,000 before registration closes at the end of August.

In Victoria alone the enumeration added about 14,000 names and the total in Saanich is not known yet.

New provincial regulations now base eligibility to vote in municipal elections entirely on residency rather than land ownership.

Corporations and absentee landlords lose their municipal vote under the new rules. Residents, whether tenant or landlord, can vote on all municipal questions, including money bylaws.

All municipalities in B.C. were required to complete voter enumerations by the end of June.

In Esquimalt, about 3,900 names have been added to the voter list, bringing it to 7,500, and in Oak Bay, 1,624 have been added so far to bring the total to 11,566.

The addition of 14,000 to the Victoria list brings it to 36,000. In Saanich, where last year's total was 33,000, the new list is still being processed in a data centre but the total is known to be higher.

Basic qualifications to vote in municipal elections remain the same as for provincial elections — at least 19 years of age, being a Canadian citizen or a British subject resident in Canada for a year and in B.C. for six months.

SAFE PLACES TO SWIM

A list of 21 swimming spots declared free of pollution has been released by the office of the capital district community health services.

Shoreline locations around Saanich, Victoria, Oak Bay and Esquimalt on the clean list include:

Victoria waterfront except at Clover Point and the bays on each side of it: the Oak Bay waterfront except the east side of Gonzales Bay; the Esquimalt waterfront, including Esquimalt Lagoon; Cadboro Bay, Mount Douglas Park and Portage Inlet beach opposite Craigflower school.

On the Saanich Peninsula, approved locations include the Sidney waterfront except at the foot of Ocean Avenue, Patricia Bay, Sayward Beach, Coles Bay, Braeman Beach, Prospect, Elk and Beaver Lakes.

Approved sites west of Victoria include Matheson Lake, Weir's Beach, Florence Lake, Langford Lake, Glen Lake and Thetis Lake.

FLASH FIRE IN MILL

B.C. Forest Products, whose operations in Victoria were stopped by a four-day strike, started back to work today with a bang — a flash fire in the steam line.

A spokesman for the company said the fire, which broke out at 12:15 a.m. today, was confined to the hot press area and was believed to have been started in debris lying against a pipe carrying steam.

Fire department officials are still investigating, but estimate damage at about $2,500.

The fire didn't delay resumption of operations in the sawmill division this morning.

In other fire calls, Miss Vivian Lane of 6-1731 Cook suffered minor leg burns when wax she was heating on her stove overheated and exploded, setting fire to cupboards.

Damage was estimated at $200.

City May Study Housing Needs

Two measures to study the extent of Greater Victoria's housing needs were suggested to Victoria's housing committee today.

Ald. Sam Bawlf suggested the Capital Regional District be urged to retain a consulting firm which would obtain from each municipality and area data for a comprehensive "overview" of the housing situation.

And Ald. Mike Young said the Landlord and Tenant Advisory Bureau, with its specialist knowledge of the whole rental housing field, be asked to undertake its own survey as a kind of swan-song before the bureau's function is superseded by the new provincial Rentalsman's office.

"In view of the fact that they are destined for extinction it might be a good project for them before they disappear," he said.

Bawlf said a "serious appraisal of our housing predicament" in this area was long overdue, and asked Ald. Alf Hood if anything on this had been tackled at the regional level.

"The answer is no," replied Hood, who said regional involvement in the housing field was suggested about a year ago but little had been done.

Colin Crisp, assistant to the city manager, said he understood the provincial housing department had recently established a research function would become readily available publicly because of its politically undesirable conclusions."

He said he thought the provincial government was "swamped" with the sheer magnitude of B.C.'s housing problems and "its inability to significantly alter the housing situation."

20-Second Saving

To save motorists 20 seconds' waiting time and a lot of frustration, the city of Victoria will spend $43,300 on installing new traffic signal equipment at the notoriously busy Humber Green intersection of Douglas and Hillside.

The actual allocation was made some months ago in the city's 1974 budget, but the public works and traffic committee today boosted the estimate by another $9,300 from the $34,000 originally provided, to allow for increased equipment costs.

Enthusiastic about the advantages of the new signal controller, traffic engineer Dave Campbell said it will reduce red-light delays in peak periods by about 20 seconds, cutting the 2-min., 40-sec. cycle to 2 mins., 20 sec.

Kiwanis Unfair At Elk—Firm

Mr. and Mrs. Ken Wallace of the Elk Lake Burger House claim the Kiwanis Club is giving them unfair competition and running them out of business.

The competition comes from a Kiwanis concession near them at the lake.

They are also concerned about another Kiwanis stand, planned for Eagle Park at the south end of the lake.

Through a letter from their lawyer W. C. McKechnie, the Wallaces appealed to Saanich council Monday asking them to restrict the operations of the Kiwanis stand.

The Wallaces claim competition from the Kiwanis club is unfair because the club pays no taxes, while they pay $4,089 in property taxes; the club is not responsible for cleaning up the surrounding grounds and, because of its low overhead, can afford to operate only in the prime season.

In McKechnie's letter, the Wallaces also claim the Kiwanis sublets the stand to a professional caterer and has little interest in it beyond making a profit.

Asking that items sold at the Kiwanis stand be restricted, McKechnie told council:

"It would be quite acceptable if the concessions sold pop, candy, ice cream novelties, potato chips and so on, but any venture which provides french fries, hamburgers or soft ice cream can only be at the expense of the Wallaces' operation."

Saanich legislative committee will investigate the matter.

A municipal official said today the Kiwanis had not sublet the concessions but had a management agreement with a caterer on a profit-sharing basis. The Kiwanis would receive $4,000 of the profits made this year.

Under an agreement with the Capital Regional District, the CRD issues leases in the park and Saanich is responsible for its maintenance and the provision of lifeguards.

Any alterations in conditions of leasing, he said, would involve the CRD as well as Saanich.

Kiwanian K. O. Moore said today the club had no intention of causing unfair competition to any businessman.

"We are not out to undermine any businessman," Moore said. "We are providing a service to the park with the co-operation of Saanich and the district."

Moore said the Kiwanis stand was near the beach in the trees away from the Wallaces' concession.

He said they had added soft cream and hot dogs to their concession about two years ago "because people were demanding it."

Escaper Back To San Quentin

Today William Clarence Robertson is going "home" . . . San Quentin prison in California.

And he's travelling under his real name . . . Neil Edward Darrow.

Darrow escaped from San Quentin June 12 while serving a life sentence without parole for murdering his wife and robbing a bank with intent to murder. He was flown today in a special charter plane under heavy guard from Victoria to Seattle.

He will then be transferred to the care of California state correction officials.

Darrow was ordered deported Monday in an immigration hearing.

Darrow entered Canada on foot near Rossland. He is believed to have arrived in Victoria late last week.

The charge of carrying concealed weapons — a dagger with a 10-inch blade and five letter openers converted to throwing knives — was withdrawn by Judge William Ostler in provincial court Monday to allow the deportation of Darrow.

Police arrested him Thursday after receiving complaints that a man was throwing knives on a downtown street.

Darrow's real identity was discovered Friday in a routine fingerprint check in Ottawa.

AN UN-BURGLARY

A Saanich man's staged theft of his own home brought him a $250 fine in Victoria provincial court Monday.

George Richard Holland, 24, of 953 Dunn, phoned police July 3 to say his home had been burglarized and two color television sets, a stereo set, and other items stolen.

Police were given a list of items worth $2,516 that were supposedly stolen.

But nine days later, Holland went to the police and admitted staging the theft to make an insurance claim.

He pleaded guilty to public mischief.

Trustees Want the Power To Okay Non-Profit Pacts

Greater Victoria school board will write the provincial government asking that boards be allowed to undertake sharing agreements with non-profit societies.

At the same time it will tell Victoria Sports School Auxiliary that it cannot legally provide the auxiliary land on which to build a gymnasium.

The auxiliary wants the board to allow it to build a gymnasium on land next to Blanshard elementary school, in return for which the school could use the gym three hours each school day.

The board has shown support for the proposal, but has been advised by its lawyer that it can share capital and operating costs only by agreements with municipalities, not societies.

The auxiliary has also been seeking financial support of Victoria city council for construction of the $75,000 gym.

Trustee Walter Donald told the board Monday that a meeting with city officials has been arranged for July 24 to dicusss the gym proposal.

In other business, the board:

Agreed to establish a committee of teachers to study Outward Bound-type outdoors projects for the district.

Decided to hire a career counsellor to work with schools and the community, helping students with work experience programs and choosing careers.

Agreed to provide space in Willows elementary school for a parent-financed Montessori pre-school class.

TRUST OR FIRE

Greater Victoria school board employees will not have to disclose their financial holdings when the Public Officials Disclosure Act takes effect Sept. 15.

The school board decided unanimously Monday not to designate any employee "a municipal employee" under the act, thus exempting all from disclosure.

"We feel you either trust nobody or you trust everybody . . ." said board chairman Peter Bunn.

"The best thing to do is to trust your staff. If you don't trust them you fire them."

The act gives municipal councils and school boards power to designate certain positions held by senior employees as subject to the disclosures act.

Trustees earlier this year voiced strong criticism of the disclosures act, and asked for amendments requiring anyone wanting to see the financial statements to show cause before a provincial court judge.

All trustees must make the disclosures, unless they announce they will not run again for office.

City in U.S. Survey

Greater Victoria School District is the only one in Canada chosen by an Oregon research team doing a 12-city survey of how responsive school districts are to the public.

The district was chosen because research showed "Victoria had a very high degree of (public) involvement in terms of parent choice," said Dr. John Jones of Eugene, Ore., one of the project directors.

Victoria parents have considerable freedom in deciding which school to send their child to, and also have the choice of several alternative schools in the district, he said.

The study, approved by the board Monday, is being conducted by the Centre for Educational Policy and Management of the University of Oregon and will take until 1976 to complete.

Other cities in the survey are Pasadena, Cal.; Atlanta, Ga.; Seattle, Wash.; Brooklyn, N.Y.; Eugene; and Victoria-Woorster, Mass. Negotiations in other cities are proceeding.

The Oregon researchers will recruit two local people to observe decision-making in the district by attending school board meetings and interviewing trustees and staff.

As well, a survey of people in the district will be made to determine their educational preferences.

DRILLS TURN

Coincidence it could have been, but a workman this morning was never more than inches away from a power unit for drilling equipment on a Government Street construction site. The firm's manager and part-owner, Herb Krenbrink, claimed Monday expensive damage was caused to the equipment when Government Street businessmen Don Randle and Jack McKenzie took turns switching off the power because they were miffed at the noise nuisance. Randle went to City Hall Monday but was told by city solicitor Jakob de Villiers Victoria is powerless to stop the drilling noise as it doesn't contravene the city's noise bylaw. Randle, manager of the New England Hotel, complained the noise made sleep impossible for night workers who stay at his establishment. He threatened to cut the switch again today . . . which could explain the presence of that hovering workman.

HEY KIDS! WE'RE HERE TO HELP YOU HAVE FUN!

A summer recreation project for Fernwood area children has found itself short of youngsters.

Recreation Summer '74, a five-man Opportunities for Youth project funded by an $8,100 federal grant, has 15 children in its summer program now but would like to have as many as 60.

The five workers organize hiking, basketball, soccer, swimming and other activities for children from age 8 to 15 every weekday from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

They have taken kids on overnight camping trips, supplying food and tents, and on hiking trips in Thetis Lake Park.

Worker Carol Rathbeber said the group would organize weekend activities as well if any children were interested.

Fernwood area children looking for something to do this summer are invited to join the project by coming to the playground of Victoria High School near the tennis courts, any day between 9:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m.

Parents may also come to discuss the project with the workers, or may phone Carol after 5:30 p.m. at 385-4780. The children pay nothing.

20,000 Added To Voters Lists

At least 20,000 persons have been added to municipal voter lists in Greater Victoria following recent enumerations using new eligibility requirements.

The total could pass 30,000 before registration closes at the end of August.

In Victoria alone the enumeration added about 14,000 names and the total in Saanich is not known yet.

New provincial regulations now base eligibility to vote in municipal elections entirely on residency rather than land ownership.

Corporations and absentee landlords lose their municipal vote under the new rules. Residents, whether tenant or landlord, can vote on all municipal questions, including money bylaws.

All municipalities in B.C. were required to complete voter enumerations by the end of June.

In Esquimalt, about 3,900 names have been added to the voter list, bringing it to 7,500, and in Oak Bay, 1,624 have been added so far to bring the total to 11,566.

The addition of 14,000 to the Victoria list brings it to 36,000. In Saanich, where last year's total was 33,000, the new list is still being processed in a data centre but the total is known to be higher.

Basic qualifications to vote in municipal elections remain the same as for provincial elections — at least 19 years of age, being a Canadian citizen or a British subject resident in Canada for a year and in B.C. for six months.

SAFE PLACES TO SWIM

A list of 21 swimming spots declared free of pollution has been released by the office of the capital district community health services.

Shoreline locations around Saanich, Victoria, Oak Bay and Esquimalt on the clean list include:

Victoria waterfront except at Clover Point and the bays on each side of it: the Oak Bay waterfront except the east side of Gonzales Bay; the Esquimalt waterfront, including Esquimalt Lagoon; Cadboro Bay, Mount Douglas Park and Portage Inlet beach opposite Craigflower school.

On the Saanich Peninsula, approved locations include the Sidney waterfront except at the foot of Ocean Avenue, Patricia Bay, Sayward Beach, Coles Bay, Braeman Beach, Prospect, Elk and Beaver Lakes.

Approved sites west of Victoria include Matheson Lake, Weir's Beach, Florence Lake, Langford Lake, Glen Lake and Thetis Lake.

FLASH FIRE IN MILL

B.C. Forest Products, whose operations in Victoria were stopped by a four-day strike, started back to work today with a bang — a flash fire in the steam line.

A spokesman for the company said the fire, which broke out at 12:15 a.m. today, was confined to the hot press area and was believed to have been started in debris lying against a pipe carrying steam.

Fire department officials are still investigating, but estimate damage at about $2,500.

The fire didn't delay resumption of operations in the sawmill division this morning.

In other fire calls, Miss Vivian Lane of 6-1731 Cook suffered minor leg burns when wax she was heating on her stove overheated and exploded, setting fire to cupboards.

Damage was estimated at $200.

City May Study Housing Needs

Two measures to study the extent of Greater Victoria's housing needs were suggested to Victoria's housing committee today.

Ald. Sam Bawlf suggested the Capital Regional District be urged to retain a consulting firm which would obtain from each municipality and area data for a comprehensive "overview" of the housing situation.

And Ald. Mike Young said the Landlord and Tenant Advisory Bureau, with its specialist knowledge of the whole rental housing field, be asked to undertake its own survey as a kind of swan-song before the bureau's function is superseded by the new provincial Rentalsman's office.

"In view of the fact that they are destined for extinction it might be a good project for them before they disappear," he said.

Bawlf said a "serious appraisal of our housing predicament" in this area was long overdue, and asked Ald. Alf Hood if anything on this had been tackled at the regional level.

"The answer is no," replied Hood, who said regional involvement in the housing field was suggested about a year ago but little had been done.

Colin Crisp, assistant to the city manager, said he understood the provincial housing department had recently established a research function would become readily available publicly because of its politically undesirable conclusions."

He said he thought the provincial government was "swamped" with the sheer magnitude of B.C.'s housing problems and "its inability to significantly alter the housing situation."

20-Second Saving

To save motorists 20 seconds' waiting time and a lot of frustration, the city of Victoria will spend $43,300 on installing new traffic signal equipment at the notoriously busy Humber Green intersection of Douglas and Hillside.

The actual allocation was made some months ago in the city's 1974 budget, but the public works and traffic committee today boosted the estimate by another $9,300 from the $34,000 originally provided, to allow for increased equipment costs.

Enthusiastic about the advantages of the new signal controller, traffic engineer Daye Campbell said it will reduce red-light delays in peak periods by about 20 seconds, cutting the 2-min., 40-sec. cycle to 2 mins., 20 sec.

Alvarez-Welch Medical Report

By DR. WALTER ALVAREZ

People who know the misery that a severe arthritis can bring with it will be happy to hear that man-made elbow, wrist and hand joints, formed out of silicone rubber, can now replace diseased and poorly working joints. Previously, only small joints could be replaced.

Dr. A. B. Swanson, an orthopedic surgeon in Grand Rapids, Mich., says that he can make about 23 different types of artificial joints that can replace those injured by disease. The first silicone rubber implants, now called "Swanson implants," were developed some 10 years ago.

HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE

I still remember well a man and his daughter whom I saw around 1920. The man, about 60, was seriously ill with a very high blood pressure. As I was struggling to help him, in those days before we had good drugs with which to control a high blood pressure (hypertension), one day he asked me to check his daughter's blood pressure. She was then about 25 years of age, and I was startled to find that she also had a very high blood pressure.

I x-rayed her heart and was astonished to find that the aorta, the big artery that comes out of the heart, was more severely diseased with an accumulation of lime salts than I had ever seen, even in a person past 70 years of age.

That finding immediately started me on studies of high blood pressure in young people, and of the inheritance of diseases of the heart and arteries in young people, and I found strong suggestions that such diseases do tend to run in families.

At the close of World War I, the U.S. Army doctors asked me to study the hearts of a number of draft evaders. I studied also their blood pressure and was surprised to find so many of the young men with hypertension. In 1919, only elderly men were supposed to have it.

Next, I studied the blood pressures of some 15,000 University of California freshmen, and again, I found many young people with a high blood pressure. Then, I taught the physical education teachers in San Francisco how to measure blood pressure in grade school children, and again, youngsters with a high blood pressure were found.

I can still remember a grade school boy with a systolic (top of the pressure wave) pressure of 180 mm, instead of a perhaps normal pressure of 120 mm. On inquiring, I found that the boy's father had a similar high pressure.

At that time I was invited to join the staff of the Mayo Clinic, and when I went to Rochester, I tried to get someone in the blood pressure department of the clinic to study the blood pressures of some animal like the rat, to see if high pressures were inherited. But they were busy and did not get around to making a study of pressures in animals.

Now, I am happy to read that a strain of "spontaneously hypertensive rats" have been developed by Japanese rsearchers, with a high blood pressure that mimics "essential hypertension" which is the type that most commonly affects human beings.

As some able physicians have said recently, the time is coming when a tendency to high blood pressure will be recognized and fought against in childhood.

People with hypertension who would like to know much about their diseases will want to get a book entitled "The Silent Disease: Hypertension," by that fine medical writer, Lawrence Galton (Crown Publishers, Inc., 419 Park Avenue South, New York, N.Y. 10016).

24 million Americans have hypertension, but because often for many years it does not produce symptoms, it is silent, and unless the person gets his blood pressure measured occasionally, he won't know he is in danger.

Panel Unconvinced of Diet Hazards

LONDON (UPI) — Man may be digging his grave with his teeth but a distinguished panel of British doctors has been unable to find any one item in his diet that might be responsible for fatal heart attacks.

The panel was set up by the Committee on Food Policy to advise it on the significance of any relationship between nutrition and heart disease and stroke. It spent three years studying the evidence in hundreds of scientific papers from all over the world.

Wryly recognizing that the more sensational the conclusions the more space in the media, the panel confessed it had nothing obviously startling to offer. It said:

"The report may be considered by many to be unexciting and may well attract less attention because it does not suggest that prevention of coronary disease can certainly or easily be effected by dietary means. It does, however, give advice which, if taken, would be beneficial to the health of our people.

"The advice cannot be better expressed than in the words of St. Paul: Let your moderation be known to all men."

But the report did have an eye-brow raiser or two especially when it took issue with present thinking in the United States on the value of polyunsaturated fats.

It said:

"A rise in the ratio of polyunsaturated fatty acids in the diet of an individual or a group of people may be followed by a reduction in the mean serum cholestrerol concentration. Nevertheless the panel are unanimous in remaining unconvinced by the available evidence that the incidence of ischaemic heat disease (narrowing or clogging of the arteries) in the United Kingdom or the death rate from it would be reduced in consequence of a rise in the ratio of polyunsaturated to saturated fatty acids in the national diet.

"In the present state of knowledge any suggestion or claim to that effect, with respect to the nation or to an individual, would be unjustified."

Stressing that its brief compelled it to concentrate on the possible nutritional aspects of heart disease the report said:

"There are many risk factors for ischaemic heart disease only some of which are dietary in nature. No single dietary factor can be regarded as predominant in determining susceptibility to the disease and any claim to the contrary is not acceptable in the context of the United Kingdom diet."

It made these recommendations:

A reduction in the amount of fat and sugar in the British diet. And, since arterial changes may begin in childhood, the training of children in correct eating and exercise habits to help avoid obesity later in life.

An investigation into the fact hard water areas have less heart disease than soft water districts.

Further research to discover why men and women diabetics get the same amount of ischaemic heart disease yet among non-diabetics more men than women die of the condition.

There is no evidence linking the number of eggs consumed to a risk of ischaemic heart disease, the report said.

Dad Takes Nursing While Mom's a Cop

MADISON, Wis. (UPI) — Mary Jo O'Donahue has become a policewoman to put her husband through nursing school.

But Mrs. O'Donahue says being fed up with past jobs she has had counted almost as much as the need to help her husband Denis, an ex-marine, go to school.

"I was sick of working at traditional women's jobs, filing for an insurance company, doing secretarial work . . . just tired of my efforts making money for somebody else.

"When I started I wasn't all that enthusiastic about being a cop but after I went through training school I realized there was potential in it for me, as a woman," said Mrs. O'Donahue, 27, the mother of a boy, Sean 2.

O'Donahue, 30, was also fed up with his life after leaving the marines, his wife said. He worked for five years selling heavy equipment.

O'Donahue wouldn't comment on the reverse in roles, but his wife said there was really nothing to explain.

"We're just people," she said, as she rushed to get her son off to nursery school and head for the practice range with her .38 calibre revolver. "He's doing what he wants to do and I'm doing something that I enjoy and get satisfaction from," she said. "So the problems involved in the reversal are really less than the problems in doing something that you're not really happy with."

A Guide to Tanning

As one of the joys of summer lies in acquiring a golden-brown complexion, the following is a layman's guide to sun-tanning:

WHERE TO TAN: The question of where to do your tanning depends largely on how you look partially clothed. Consult a full-length mirror, inquiring "Mirror, mirror, made of glass, am I too fat across the shoulders?"

If the mirror replies "Speaking objectively, you look exactly like a giant, albino elephant," it may be wise to conduct your sun-worshipping from a strictly private area, perhaps the inside of the packing case from a grand piano.

WHAT TO WEAR: Most people choose a small bathing suit. While it is permissible to lie on your stomach and undo the bra hooks to avoid the offending white stripe, bear in mind that you cannot jump up quickly when an enormous hairy spider crawls across the back of your thigh.

WHAT TO DO: Since you invariably feel silly lying there simmering in the sun like a gigantic rump roast, it is necessary to find something to take your mind off how ridiculous you feel and how unbearably hot you are.

You may try reading a book. If it is sunny enough to tan, however, it is too sunny to read, as the letters tend to cavort about the page like hyperactive fireflies and form idiotic sentences like "Srum, whep heliop das freezen."

You could invite someone to tan with you, preferably someone whiter, ideally someone inclined toward blotches or freckles. Never invite anyone with an olive complexion who will turn golden brown in thirty-five minutes while you lie there encased in skin that is the same attractive hue as the underbelly of a mackerel.

You could always drink. But since one drink in the sun is equivalent to two in the shade, there is a distinct possibility that after one Planter's Punch you will not be able to get out of the chaise lounge, and will have to lie there all afternoon, helplessly chortling over the sentence, "Srum, whep heliop das freezen."

dear abby
You Decide Morality

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 19-year-old girl who is getting more and more confused about the word "morality." Who decides what is morally right? My parents? Society? The law? Or should I make the decision myself?

My parents are divorced and I live with my mother. She keeps company with a nice enough man, but they go away together for weekends, and I'm sure they do more than hold hands. I don't know why they don't get married.

Meanwhile, my mother doesn't want me to stay out too late with my boyfriend. He's in law school, and we can't afford to get married until he graduates.

He doesn't see anything wrong in premarital sex, but it just doesn't seem right to me. I've been able to hold out so far, but why should I. The pill is available, so there is no danger of my getting pregnant. Besides, we love each other, so what's wrong with making love?

I'm sure my mom thinks it's okay for her to do what she does, but she'd have a fit if I did it. How come the difference in standards? — Puzzled

DEAR PUZZLED: Your mother (like most mothers) regards you as her responsibility, not as a mature young woman who can accept the responsibility for her own actions.

If you feel sufficiently mature and competent to set your own standards for your own reasons, do it.

Who decides what is "morally right?" With the help of your learning, examples, experience and conscience and with an eye for consequences — YOU decide. And God bless.

DEAR ABBY: I am 55, and recently remarried. She's a terrific woman who is close to my age. My problem is that some of my tactless friends keep reminding my wife that my ex-wife was pencil slim and dressed like a fashion plate. Now my present wife is determined to diet down to skin and bones.

I think this is ridiculous. I don't want another skinny woman whose main concern in life is dressing to the nines and keeping her weight down, and who, quite frankly looked like a prune in the raw.

How can I convince my wife that I like the well-padded, soft cuddly woman she was when I married her? Prefers A Peach

DEAR PREFERS: Doesn't your wife know all this? If not — tell her. If you do, and she continues to pay more attention to your tactless friends than she does to you, you have bigger problems than you think.

DEAR ABBY: In reply to Double Ugly: I have never met an ugly person I didn't like. They have personality plus!

When I was a young girl, I learned the little fellows with the big freckles and the stringy red hair that hung in their yellow-green eyes were the ones to ask a favor of. The handsome guys were too busy thinking about themselves.

Mr. Ugly, I like you already, for you have shown a lot of character and humility by asking for help with your problem. That is beauty right there! So you see, you aren't as ugly as you thought you were. One Who Knows.

Metrication of U.K. Hung Up in Market

LONDON (AP) — British homemakers don't like their meat and vegetables being weighed in those foreign kilograms instead of pounds and ounces.

Therefore, British butchers and grocers are refusing to go over to the metric system. And this, says the government's metrication board in its annual report, is one reason why Britain's changeover to the metric system is running two years behind schedule.

The board suggests that the government should name a date when all shoppers will be made to go metric.

The target date had been the end of next year, but it will not be achieved until early in 1978, the board said.

Stores, such as the butchers' and grocers', which weigh foods in front of the customer, are unlikely to start using metric measures until they are legally required to do so.

The government must remove the remaining legislative obstacles to metric change, the board says. In particular, it should be made legal to sell in prescribed metric quantities all those goods, such as sugar, which at present can only be sold in packages relating to imperial quantities—that's pounds and ounces.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Forecast for Weds., July 17
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Take stock of relations with neighbors, relatives. You can be independent without being arrogant. You can get across views without being domineering. Know it and strive for harmony — without abandoning principles. Message will be clarified.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Trust hunch. Some persons offering to co-operate, have ulterior motives. Know it and protect yourself. Don't be too polite. Be what you are — which is hardy, frank, direct, stubborn. Then others will get your message loud and clear — which is all to the good.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Cycle high — get going. Be independent in thought, action. Highlight originality, creativity. Imprint your own style. Be conspicuous. Wear bright, summer colors. Let others know you are here and intend to do something about it.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You know how that you don't know it all. Aquarius, Leo and Scorpio individuals are apt to be part of picture. Accent is on what occurs out-of-sight. Get behind the scenes. Be specific, frank and practical. Enjoy sweet nothings without believing them. You will comprehend.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Accent on romance, friendship, hopes, desires. You are rewarded for past efforts. Member of opposite sex plays significant role. You make changes. You become more aware of who you are and where you want to go. Gemini, Virgo persons are in picture.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Accent is on professional superiors, advancement, responsibility, standing in community. You get on more solid footing. Your lifestyle undergoes review, possible change. Taurus, Libra persons could play significant roles.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You may be trying to accomplish too much, too soon. Messages, calls and correspondence have elusive qualities. Take stock. Get second wind. Travel is featured. Bring facts into focus. Pisces, Virgo persons may be in picture.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 - Nov. 21): Nothing halfway; there is intensity, added pressure, responsibility. Older invididual is in picture. You will be calling upon past experience, lessons learned from authority figure. Money and partnership, love and mate these areas are highlighted. Protect your interests!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You gain added recognition because your ability to communicate will be enhanced. More persons become aware of you. Those with problems will confide and confess. Be sympathetic without becoming inextricably involved. Aries, Libra persons are in picture.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Work, routine, health, money as it affects offspring or lover — these are in spotlight. Maintain independent stance. Bring forth creative resources. Try new places to dine. Revive interests. You receive meaningful compliment from member of opposite sex.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Emotional ties refuse to go away. Be aware of how you feel and what you intend to do about it. Your intuition works overtime. What you feel tends to dominate over what you may think or reason. Another Aquarian may be featured prominently.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Practice, perfect, communicate and appraise — get head on values. Reject second-hand information. Make inquiries. Insist on answers, not evasions. Deal with one who is frank, even if views clash with your own.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are an organizer, knowing what will be of value and what should be discarded. You live and love in intense manner. Your loyalties are strong — and so are your dislikes. August will be your most important month of 1974. Capricorn and Cancer people play significant roles in your life. You have birth pattern which indicates much success in business and you should work for yourself.

Liberation Movement Is Shifting

By MARSHA DUBROW

NEW YORK (Reuter) — The women's liberation movement in North America is at a crossroads, moving from trying to achieve equality in a man's world to changing what men are in society.

The National Organization for Woman (N.O.W.), the world's most powerful feminist force, declared one of its top priorities was to create a gender-free society, rather than fight primarily for women to reach equal status with men.

Lawyer-author Karen de Crow, elected N.O.W. president at its conference in Houston, said:

"Women's rights is not enough. We don't want to enter the mainstream, we want to change it. We want to challenge what's happening.

"We should not try to be equal to where men are in society, but to change what they are, to change the disfunctional way we live which harms women, men and children."..

She said that instead of girls fighting to enter the Little League, "I say, do away with Little League.

The organization is a microcosm of stresses on males to compete, achieve, succeed and be infallible."

After the interview, it was learned that a 12-year-old Cincinnati boy hanged himself because of the pressures related to his Little League.

One major challenge to society was to call for the impeachment of President Nixon, especially because he has impounded funds for education, child care, health and research, vital to the needs of women.

She has received numerous Bibles whose anonymous senders have underlined the passage about judge not, for you shall be judged in turn.

The women want to spread the word of feminism around the world and resolved to increase their international affiliates, which now number 14.

N.O.W. is challenging the mainstream through taking on some of its major institutions, from the tax department to the steel industry and Sears Roebuck, one of the country's largest companies.

They also are combatting right-wing groups such as the Ku Klux Klan, John Birch Society and Anti-Abortion Right-to-Life for their opposition to various aspects of women's rights.

N.O.W., the largest feminist organization with 40,000 members in 700 chapters in the United States, will encourage women to withhold all taxes, including what they term "unsocial insecurity" if the equal-rights-for-women amendment to the constitution is not ratified.

"If the amendment doesn't go into effect, women will be denied adequate representation for their taxation. Only five more states are needed to ratify the amendment for it to become law.

Feminists are increasing their muscle by joining with compliance and regulatory agencies such as the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) and the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) to force an end to sex discrimination. Two of N.O.W.'s main targets are the steel industry and Sears, which has been labelled a "track one" target by the EEOC for its alleged discriminatory practices.

The Sears annual report stresses its affirmative action program is a success and women are well represented in all levels of its mammoth operations. The commission and N.O.W. disagree.

N.O.W. legal vice-president Judith Lonnquist has filed a challenge to the justice department's consent decree awarding women and minorities back pay in the steel industry. Attorney Lonnquist argued that the terms of settlement were not sufficient.

Feminists have achieved success recently in lobbying with the Federal Communications Commission FCC in television station licence challenges in Denver, San Diego and New York. Although none has been ruled on, the various stations are working on improvements in their employment practices and programming regarding women.

Their efforts also are spread over the widest possible age and sex range, including males which make up 10 per cent of N.O.W.'s membership and lesbians who complain they are oppressed with the egalitarian N.O.W.

Men and older women decreed they would no longer be the silent minorities within the organization.

Victorian Produces Hopscotch History

By LON WOOD
Times Staff

In China it's called tao fang tze. In Germany the word is himmel-und-holle while the Spaniards call it la coxcojilla.

To most North Americans the name is hopscotch — the game created and re-created by children for centuries. It entails hopping, jumping, skipping, squatting on heels or dancing over lines to avoid danger in the form of witches, crocodiles, poison, snakes, dragons, bad luck or bears.

There may or may not be something to throw or kick or carry — such as a tor, lagger, puck, potsie, dump, scotch or pally-ully.

The ultimate object is to make it home — or to heaven, or to paradise or to an ice cream cone.

But all this is just a touch on the history and present range of hopscotch contained in what must be the most complete anthology of hopscotch a newly-published book How to Play Hopscotch by Billie Estrada of 714 Lindsay Street in Victoria.

Estrada is a native Californian who began a part-time photographic career while raising her two children, Denise and Raul. Her photos have appeared in many U.S. newspapers, brochures and books. Recently she worked for Hancock House Publishers in Victoria. Her book was published by Agency Press.

Estrada told the Times she hopes the book will become part of public school programs in Canada.

"There seems to be very little information anywhere on this subject," she said. "Since there has been much emphasis on the need for more physical fitness in Canada — especially for schoolchildren — I have hopes . . ."

The 50-page book is written and photographed by Estrada, while son Raul did the diagrams and Denise is credited with "design help."

The book outlines 21 sets of rules for hopscotch in big, bold print. There is also more than a little of the known history of the game thrown in.

For instance, there are hopscotch diagrams etched in the pavement of the old Forum in Rome. And the game seems to have some meaning related to the progress of the soul from earth to heaven and was perhaps even an early form of dancing.

". . . The game of hopscotch has always been difficult to define in print because of the many variations being passed along for hundreds of years by hearsay only," Estrada says. "Most ways to play it somehow repeat themselves over and over again. Basically, then, these familiar patterns recur in many game books . . ."

Long ago in early child-lore, as well as today, says the book, lines were not to be stepped on or they would bring bad luck (falling down stairs, hair falling out, a bad marriage, teapots breaking or mother's back breaking), or lines were to be stepped on to see what might happen in the future.

"In a child's world there is always the freedom to improvise and the enthusiasm to play with nothing more than a few scratches in the earth . . . a scotch to hop over!" says Estrada.

Anti-Lib Activist Has 'Em Hissing

By SALLY QUINN

WASHINGTON (WP) — Phyllis Schlafly, chairman of the Society to Oppose Passage of the ERA, clutched the podium, leaned toward the audience and said in a forceful strident voice: "Supporting the Equal Rights Amendment is like trying to kill a fly with a sledge hammer. You don't kill the fly but you end up breaking all the furniture . . . We cannot reduce women to equality. Equality is a step down for most women."

The audience at a recent National Town Meeting at the Kennedy Centre hissed.

'Such Slobs'

Later, waiting to go on a local talk show, Phyllis Schlafly crossed her legs demurely, straightened her baby blue dress, patted her blonde spit curls, patted more powder on her nose, and said, "They always come and hiss at me. They're such slobs. And you can't see their mouths move so you don't know where it's coming from. They do it all the time. But I'm just a happy, even-tempered person and I don't let an obnoxious crowd ruin my day."

Mrs. Schlafly ("to me the expression Ms. really means mixery) is known variously as the sweetheart of the silent majority, the sex symbol of the right wing, the darling of the John Birch Society's annual God, Family, and Country Rally, the standardbearer for those women who want to remain on the pedestal, and the anathema of the women's movement.

And she rattles off her credentials enthusiastically: "I worked my way through college at night as a gunner and ballistics technician at the largest ammunition plant in the world, and graduated from Radcliffe with a masters in political science, Phi Beta Kappa."

Eagle Trademark

She went on to co-author four books, run for Congress (and lose) three times, start her own newsletter, be vice-president of the National Federation of Republican Women and start her own ultra-conservative women's group, "The Eagles Are Flying." (She wears a large gold eagle on her shoulder, "My trademark.)

She is married to J. Fred Schlafly, a lawyer from Alton, Ill., custodian of the "America Wake Up" foundation.

She is 49, a Roman Catholic and has six children. "I breastfed them for six months."

Mrs. Schlafly got her start in "this ERA business" several years ago when she wrote about it in her newsletter and "it just snowballed." Then "one of the women's libbers got me to debate. I boned up for it. I guess they asked me because they figured 'I wouldn't be a women's libber.'"

They figured right.

"I don't think the movement has been beneficial to women in any way," she says. "I think their objectives are radical and do not relate to the true facts about women. The only reason they have gotten where they have is because they appeal to women who know they've been discriminated against. The movement is detrimental to women and is counterproductive and degrading. The greatest put-down is the literature of the movement. They say they want women to be treated just like men but women don't want to be."

Mrs. Schlafly thinks, for instance, that in the business world women would be much better off to use their own feminine approach. If I'm the only woman among a group of male executives," she says, "they clean up their language and behave themselves better."

She giggles with pride.

"I know some women who are excellent business executives," she says, "but it seems that most men are better executives than women. Some people just have those qualities. For instance, I don't think lawyers have very good executive abilities. I think that's Nixon's problem."

Men Preferred

She thinks, too, that if you walk down the street and ask every woman whether she'd rather work for a man or a woman "every one of them would rather work for a man. So if you promote one woman to an executive in an office you make that woman happy but the 20 others in the office unhappy."

The antiwomen's movement groups, such as Fascinating Womanhood which espouses wifehood and motherhood (treat your man like a king and he'll treat you like a queen") are groups "I think I would go along with."

Yet she is involved in a full-time "volunteer" career herself, is on the road making speeches and appearances, and on several occasions has been away nights and weekends running for office. However, her mother lives at home with her; and she has a full-time housekeeper.

"It's obvious that I'm fully liberated," she says. "And that irritates some of my proponents. It used to be that a woman's work was never done. But now due to work-saving devices in the home she has more time. Her work is done. If she wants to stay at home and play cards or keep house or work outside the home, she has a choice. But the reason there are so few women executives or women in Congress is that most women won't put their career first. But even if a woman does have a career she won't put into it what a man would. You don't get to be an executive at General Motors, for instance, by putting in a 40-hour week."

She explains her own career by saying that "it's something I can pick up or put down when I want to. And I've got enough energy to work. I guess I've always worked double time."

She thinks it's all a matter of balancing one's time.

'Look at Golda'

"If a woman can work and still make her husband think he's the greatest and be able to keep the kids happy, then it's okay. It's fine. But I believe the most fulfilling role for a woman is that of wife and mother. Look at Golda Meir. She was the first to denounce the libbers as a bunch of bra-burning nuts. She says the most fulfilling thing for a woman is to have a baby."

Mrs. Schlafly is a walking contradiction, as they say. Her outward demeanor and dress is one of a feminine, bridge playing, affluent housewife. She smiles a lot, giggles, worries about her appearance and makes polite conversation. Yet, on the podium she comes on like a female George Wallace. She is tough and aggressive, totally unlike the role she espouses for most women. At one moment on the panel at the National Town Meeting, she attacked Rep. Martha Griffiths for saying she had spoken an untruth and demanded an apology. Later she would cover her mouth when she coughed with a lady-like gesture, and with a wrinkle of her nose, ask where the "little girls' room" was.

Envies Martha

She says she envies Martha Mitchell her gift of gab.

"Martha Mitchell talks so easily. I wish I could. It's taken me a long time to be able to get up and talk in front of people. I'm really basically very shy."

Ask her about marriage.

"Marriage is like pantyhose. It all depends on what you put into it."

Cooking for One Can Be a Chore

By HILDA BEASTALL

Preparing meals every day for one person becomes a monotonous chore unless you are fully aware that your continued health and happiness depend in no small part on the nutrition your body receives from your choice of food.

No other person is likely to lay down a list of do's and dont's for your meals, though reports on current nutrition findings are to be read in almost every newspaper issue. These will provide clues about the usefulness of some of the foods you like, and some you may not have ventured into. Try something new to you occasionally; you may discover anothr good food which becomes part of everyday life.

Whether you are 17, 47, or 87 you need nutrition at each of the three meals every day. The difference for the three ages is in quantity not in quality. The three ages can indeed enjoy exactly the same meal items, with the 17-year-old eating the largest portions, the active 47-year-old slightly less, and the less active 87-year-old small portions with possibly a snack between.

Lists of recommended foods issued by Department of Health Services invariably include milk or milk products at each meal. Many people simply do not like milk; others find that if it is used in the recommended quantities their appetite for other foods is cut to the point of not being able to take the servings of vegetables, fruits or cereal foods.

A careful look at "milk products" discloses that a two percent fluid milk lacks only a percentage of butterfat. The vitamins A and D are added as they are to whole milk. These added vitamins are also present in skim milk powder which makes a cheaper and convenient way of getting a lot of nutrients in a small portion.

The protein and calcium is retained in the processing, and the added vitamins go a long way to making up losses which would be unavoidable in meals these days of high priced meat, fish and poultry.

In the milk products list too are cheese (Cheddar and cottage are two good buys) and yogurt, preferably the plain unflavored since you are then free to use it with fruit, vegetable, cereal or salad just as you like, without the unnecessary calories from the sweetened fruit.

Substituting in the meat section needs a bit of careful planning. You can extend meat dishes by adding rolled oats, rolled wheat, or wheat germ.

You can substitute for meat by using dried soybeans which are as complete a protein as meat; or by using brown rice with wholewheat flour and soy flour in equal proportions (raw measurement); or dried peas with brown rice and grated cheese, using a proportion of quarter-cup dried peas to a half cup of brown rice and two tablespoons of grated Cheddar cheese. Nutrition charts give brown rice above white rice in food value.

Eggs are a source of protein, to be used as such when making casserole or top-of-stove dishes without meat. Nuts, particularly peanuts are good quality protein, as also are cashew nuts.

When you are using these foods as important additions for palatable meals, be sure you get the unsalted, raw nuts. Keep them in closed packets or jars in refrigerator to prevent their oils becoming rancid.

Use nuts in baking cookies, in meat substitute dishes with rice, beans, lentils, and on yogurt and salads. Grind them fine if you must but only just before serving.

In the bread and cereals group, substitute wholewheat bread for white every time. Its higher initial cost per loaf is offset by the added "staying power" of a good wholewheat bread, with two slices being as satisfying as four of a light fluffy white loaf.

If you can make a couple of small loaves yourself each week of whole grains of different kinds for variety, so much the better. This way you avoid monotony. Cooking for one can be made interesting by sharing a homemade loaf with another who likes good food but doesn't "bother" to cook or bake. You may start them on a new regime.

The same in the cereal section. Make different mixes of whole grain muesli, adding bits of cut dates, apples (in season) or other fresh fruit. Recipes for muesli appear from time to time in this column. Use yogurt or cottage cheese on two or three tablespoons of a mix for any meal, particularly for breakfast when in a hurry.

The dry, lightly baked mix keeps well in a glass jar refrigerated. The fruits are best added when serving.

The vegetable group offers substitutes in plenty. Buy (if not growing for yourself) carrots enough for three days; then beets for the next three. With them use a small cabbage (use some raw, some steamed, and some in a casserole).

Green vegetables should be as fresh as you can get them. Green peas, beans, zucchini, broccoli, look for these when in season locally. Buy only enough for two days at most for they loose vitamins every hour they wait to be cooked. This is where even the smallest plot of ground is beneficial. A balcony planter comes into healthful focus all year with fresh green parsley, chives or lettuce each day to add to bought produce.

Cardiac Patients 'Rest Too Much'

CHICAGO (UPI) — The chest pains are gone and they've told you you've survived your heart attack.

That's fine, but it doesn't pay the bills or look after the business. The future looks like six months propped up in a chair, staring at the tube, as a cardiac invalid.

A Philippine-born doctor says it doesn't have to be that way. Dr. Noel Nequin is making strides in convincing people in the Chicago area that heart attack patients can and should exercise, as soon as they can, to eliminate the debilitating effects of too much bed rest.

By following a well supervised, progressive program of activity, most heart patients now can return to work within eight to 12 weeks instead of observing what was once a "mandatory six months off," Nequin said in an interview.

Nequin, 36, a native of Iloilo City in the Philippines, is an internist and director of the cardiac reconditioning and rehabilitation unit at Swedish Covenant Hospital on Chicago's north side.

No Space Too Small For Growing Garden

Feeling that a space is too small for a garden is scarcely the right approach. No space is too small as evidenced by true miniature gardens in dishes or jars. The smaller the space the more careful planning for its use is needed before putting in any plants.

It requires imagination to visualize the shape, color and general mature habit of each plant, since the number of plants is limited. Each feature and each plant must have a definite purpose if the little area is not to become just a collection.

Not that there's anything wrong in making a collection of one genus in a small plot. In fact that in itself is a project worth exploring if the site has the requirements for success.

In today's communities there are likely to be more tiny city gardens hidden behind tall buildings and between walls. And before you say this can never happen here, remember we said the same about high-rise blocks 15 years ago.

A small city garden may be 20 by 40 feet. Obviously the owner will be able to afford to invest in the best and to be meticulous in the care. This is one place where perfection is possible if planning is carefully.

The enclosed small garden needs a feature which is pleasing at all seasons since the area must be a living retreat at all times. It may be a sunken or raised pool in a purchased concrete container; or a tiny fountain and pool combined, with the water continuously recycled by an electric motor, turned off when not being viewed. Water brings birds to an area if shelter and food is also present.

The feature is placed off-center to give an impression of greater space. A well constructed wood seat at some point is pleasant and practical for getting one out there to enjoy everything. You would be surprised how all city sounds are muted by high walls. This was found by New York City and Brooklyn mini-gardeners as far back as the 1930's, when delightful little retreats were designed to offset the noise and air pollution already apparent there. In them, you could feel remote as the wilds of Long Island.

Soil will be of prime importance yet it cannot be prepared until some scheme of planting is decided upon. If the area is shaded all the time, use texture, shape and color of foliage instead of striving for brilliant flower color.

An overpowering high wall of an adjacent building is masked by a trellis to a height of eight to 10 feet, but it must be of good design. Even the erection of heavy posts with a beam along the top and false eaves as an overhang will give the illusion of a building that is part of the garden. Climbing plants and one shrub to one side of the "entrance" add to the illusion of space.

Light colored paint applied to the lower portion of solid walls increases light reflection. Dark green foliage of shrubs add to the distance effect, while golden and variegated will stand out as being nearer.

In all, begin to know the kinds of plants before you design; but have plenty ideas to talk and think over before working out your plan.

SOLUTION WEDNESDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

In tournaments and duplicate games, many players do not open the bidding in first or second position with only a four-card major suit. Hence, when they open with one heart or one spade, partner knows that the opener has at least five cards in his major suit. Thus, if the bidding becomes competitive, responder can raise opener's major suit with only three cards, knowing that his partnership has a playable trump suit of at least eight cards.

At times, the refusal to open in a four-card major suit turns out well; at times, it doesn't. Today's deal illustrates this theme. Both sides vulnerable. South deals.

NORTH
♠ K J 9 5 3 2

SOUTH
♠ 10 6
♡ 10 3
◇ A K
♣ Q J 9 6 5 3 2

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
Pass	1 ♠	Pass	1 NT
2 ♣	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
3 ♣	Pass	4 ♣	Pass
5 ♣	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♡.

The defence was quick and smooth. West's king-of-hearts opening lead was overtaken by East's ace, after which East played back the spade eight, an obvious singleton when one considers dummmy's spade holding. West won this lead with his ace and promptly returned a spade, which East ruffed for the setting trick.

Suppose that West belonged to the school that did not believe in opening four-card major suits. In this case, he would have opened the bidding with one heart. In all probability, North would then have arrived at a four-spade contract. Unless East had the clairvoyance to lead a club (which West would ruff), the four-spade contract would almost surely be brought home safely. All declarer would lose would be two trump tricks and a heart.

But with West having opened the bidding with one spade, it became virtually impossible for North-South to reach the four-spade contract. North gave it a try with his two-spade bid, but of course South could not interpret this call as showing a spade suit; he naturally interpreted it as a cue-bid in spades.

Perhaps if North had bid spades again (instead of four clubs), South would have known that North had a good spade suit. But even this (presumed) sequence, it is highly doubtful whether South would have raised to game in spades with the doubleton 10-6. And so let's score a triumph for the bidding of four-card major suits.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

"We checked the staff today," Peter told his wife. "Some of the results surprised me. For example, exactly half the girls are married, but only a third of the men. Just two-fifths of them, all are married."

Helen smiled. "I guess the girls have a good time, but how many girls do you have now?"

"Figure it out," replied Peter. "There are 30 men."

How many girls?

Thanks for an idea to H. Barnes, Sharon, Ohio.

Yesterday's answer: Magic Square had 16 numbers, 5 to 20.

Job Awarded

The provincial government has awarded a $44,000 contract to Dalziel Construction Ltd. for interior demolition work in the Dowell Building.

The work is the first phase in renovations which will ultimately produce provincial government offices in the Wharf Street building.

MASS KILLER TO APPEAL

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — The jury which found Elmer Wayne Henley (right) guilty of killing six of the 27 young males slain in the Houston mass murders case meets today to consider the sentence. His mother says the conviction will be appealed.

The prosecution has asked the jurors to send Henley to prison for life.

The jury of six men and six women issued its guilty verdict against the 18-year-old high school dropout in less than an hour after getting the case Monday.

INFLATION HITS TELEPHONE POLES

TORONTO (CP) — Like everything else these days, it costs more to drive your car into a telephone pole.

Metropolitan Toronto police estimate it costs $50 to replace a wooden hydro or telephone pole compared with $250 three years ago.

If the pole is equipped with accessories such as transformers and cross-arms, the cost of replacement might range from $800 to $5,000, police say.

Metro police department says repair estimates for its officers list an aluminum pole on an expressway at $750 to replace and a concrete pole at $850.

They estimate the cost of replacing a fire hydrant at $1,400, and street traffic signs cost $130 each.

LONDON — It was a military parade like so many hundreds of others Queen Elizabeth attends.

But two ex-servicemen had a surprise Monday for Her Majesty.

As they marched past, the two unfurled a banner demanding higher pensions for veterans.

The men were led away to Aldershot police station and charged with creating a nuisance.

PEORIA, Ill. — Sarah "Baby Doll" Cowan, the grandmotherly hooker, was found dead Monday at the age of 73.

County coroner Horace Payton said a heart attack apparently killed the old trouper who, true to her profession, died in bed.

Death came only a few days after authorities had arrested Miss Cowan for the 51st time and she had announced her "retirement."

LOS ANGELES — Johnny Carson was injured Monday when he fell off an exercise board he was using in his Los Angeles home.

The talk show host is recovering at home from head and back injuries.

Carson, 48, is expected back in the studios later this week.

LOS ANGELES — A $1.5-million out-of-court settlement of a suit filed by entertainer Ann-Margret after a fall at a Lake Tahoe hotel was approved Monday in United States District Court.

She had charged that the hotel negligently allowed a platform on which she was descending to tilt, causing her to fall.

MIAMI — Whoever stole a sack from the back seat of an old Chevy got a seven-foot surprise.

Inside the bag was a rattlesnake which had been caught a short time before Monday by police Lieut. Ross MacDonald. He was taking it to the Miami Serpentarium.

MacDonald caught the snake in a suburban area after it was found by a woman watering her lawn.

VANCOUVER — A spokesman for the Oblates of Mary Immaculate announced Monday that Rev. John Massel, 45, has been appointed head of the Roman Catholic order's 130 missionaries in Western Canada. He succeeds Rev. John Hennessy.

LONDON — Juan Henshaw, 25, was found guilty in court Monday of stalking London's pigeons with a bow and arrow. Henshaw, pleading not guilty, told the court he was doing the city a service since the birds "spread a lot of disease."

CARSON CITY, Nev. — A former Ziegfeld Follies dancer, who has been married 10 times and spent 11 months in the Nevada state prison on an attempted abortion conviction, filed for the democratic nomination for governor Monday. Olga Covelli, who now manages a boutique in Reno, paid her $150 filing fee and then told newsmen, "I don't know anybody worthwhile running for the job.

47' GRENFELL DESIGN DISP. CRUISER. Her heavy beamy planked hull is graced with bulwarks, laid teak decks, and enough mirror like varnish to keep the traditionalist happy. The large owner's cabin aft has two double berths and its own toilet compartment and shower. There is an apartment-size galley, refrigeration, deep freeze adjoining the main salon. Another stateroom forward completes the accommodations. For the skipper who wants a ship there is a walk-in engine room complete with her main diesel, two diesel gen. sets and furnace. This fine yacht must be seen to be appreciated and is offered for the first time at a third her replacement for a quick sale. By appointment only.

RECORDER SAVES $85,000 HOUSE

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — Howard Fagan's tape recorder saved his $85,000 home, firemen said.

Fagan and his family were going away so he plugged in his tape recorder to the telephone. The recorder, which contains a heat-sensing device, is rigged to dial the fire department when the temperture climbs beyond the danger point.

When the fire broke out at the Fagan home, the tape recorder called the Gainesville fire department and appealed in its metallic tones, "Help. My house is on fire. I live at . . ."

Before firemen could reach the scene and put out the flames, the fire had done an estimated $3,000 damage to the house. But firemen said without the timely alarm, it would have been destroyed.

Porno Plea Rejected By Saanich

Saanich council decided Monday night not to march with the Salvation Army in its war on pornography.

For one thing, there was the unanswered question: what's obscene?

Only Ald. William Noel favored supporting recommendations from the Salvation Army concerning pornography and obscenity and Ald. Les Passmore was downright opposed.

Passmore said he did not want to be a censor and he noted a recommendation for more "controls against the possession, sale and distribution of obscene material" failed to define what is obscene.

The Army's call for "prohibition of photographs and other literary material which exploit violence, brutality, sexual perversion and sexual intercourse" left him shocked, said Passmore.

"You couldn't even look at TV at night," he said.

Campus Work End Near At Brentwood

The first building in Brentwood College's expansion program is expected to be completed in mid-August.

The new two-storey, $250,000 senior student residence is being built at the south-end of the school campus overlooking Mill Bay. It will accommodate 60 students.

Headmaster David Mackenzie said that during the summer recess period, the residence building will accommodate people booking the school facilities for seminars, small conventions and tennis camps.

Future construction planned in the school's building program are a new recreation-social centre for senior students and a science-fine arts centre.

Contractor on the residence building is Fraser Construction of Duncan.

Saanich Adds Parks Staff

Three otner parks in Saanich—Aleinay, Fairburn school and Royal Oak—were staffed with supervisors today.

Saanich council decided Monday to vote funds for supervisors because of demands by parents in the three areas.

Money for supervision at the three parks earlier had been cut out of the parks budget.

Saanich also decided Monday to spend $200 to provide two bathroom units from July 15 to Sept. 15 at Cordova Bay beach.

ICBC KANGAROO JUSTICE?

VANCOUVER (CP) — A lawyer representing 37 private insurance companies called Insurance Corporation of B.C. claims centres kangaroo courts during a B.C. Supreme Court hearing Monday.

Douglas Brown withdrew the remark, however, after a objection by lawyer John McAlpine, representing the B.C. attorney-general as defendant.

The insurance firms are seeking a ruling that the province acted unconstitutionally in excluding them from competing with Autoplan, the government's auto insurance scheme.

Douglas Scrivener, head of ICBC's claims division, testified that claims centres work well because adjusters generally have all the information they need in one place.

He agreed under defence questioning that many facets of coverage provided by Autoplan are similar to coverage previously provided by private insurers but added that Autoplan is more flexible to motorists' needs.

He said that Autoplan facilitates greater flexibility in underwriting and allows for the use of criteria that apply specifically to B.C.

The hearing continues today.

Her TV First: 'Live' Suicide

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — Television talk show host Chris Chubbuck wrote her own death script and then carried it out by putting a gun to her temple and pulling the trigger as television viewers watched.

The attractive WXLT-TV anchorwoman, 29 died in a hospital 14 hours later.

Her handwritten, blood-spattered newscript read: "Today Chris Chubbuck shot herself during a live broadcast."

The story she had scrawled in longhand was found on the desk where she sat Monday morning and calmly announced to viewers what she said was a television first:

"In keeping with Channel 40's policy of bringing you the latest in blood and guts and in living color you are going to see another first-attempted suicide."

The she reached into a shopping bag behind her desk, pulled out a .38-calibre revolver, fired a single shot and slumped forward.

"It took less than a second to get the gun to her head and pull the trigger," news director Mike Simmons said.

Last week, Miss Chubbuck jokingly hinted to colleagues that she was contemplating suicide. No one took her seriously.

"I thought at the time it was just a bad joke and changed the subject," co-worker Rob Smith said.

Her mother, Mrs. M. D. Chubbuck, recently named public affairs director for the ABC affiliate, was "terribly, terribly depressed."

"She said that constantly. She had no close friends. She was already 29 years old and it bothered her. She was very sensitive."

Monday morning she was reading a news report about a shootout at a bar when there was a mechanical difficulty with a film clip.

"She covered for that and didn't seem a bit nervous or upset," said Valerie Rubin, a Sarasota Herald Tribune reporter who saw the telecast.

"Then she picked her right hand up from behind the desk, put a square-looking little gun to her head and squeezed the trigger.

"Instantly she jerked forward and her face fell on the desk. Then the picture went dead. I thought it was some sort of tasteless joke at first."

Shocked camera crews cut the show when they realized what had happened and the screen went black. The station continued broadcasting with public-service programming.

West May Secede —Tory

OTTAWA (CP) — A new feeling of Western alienation soon may threaten Confederation more than Quebec nationalism ever has done, veteran Conservative MP Gerald Baldwin said Monday.

In a strongly worded news release, the member for the Alberta riding of Peace River said Western rights, "including the right of provincial self-determination in proper areas," must be retained "or else."

Baldwin said in an interview he is afraid that if the new majority Liberal government does not recognize Western interests, a demagogue might arise to marshal separatist sentiment into a viable political force.

Although such feelings are not new in the West, "I've not heard this as generally or as strongly before as I did during the campaign."

"The facts I came across during the campaign were such that I thought it was pretty important to put the government, Parliament, the press and the nation on notice," Baldwin said.

In his news release, he said "there is more potential for a dissolution of the bonds of nationalism now in the western provinces than there ever was in Quebec where the economic consequences of separatism were always factors which prompted Quebecois to vote to stay in Confederation."

"The economy of the West is viable and could sustain an independent state with ease and this is very obvious to Westerners and more of them are openly saying so."

Baldwin opposed any movement leading to Western alienation, but "the situation is not unlike that of a tender-dry forest which needs only someone to strike a match to cause a conflagration."

Although the Liberals under Prime Minister Trudeau won 141 of the 264 Commons seats at stake in the July 8 general election, the former Conservative House leader said "nearly three-quarters of the people who voted in the West have decisively rejected, not just Trudeau and his Liberals, but the Eastern establishment."

Transportation, "a god damn mess all over the place," the problems of Western industry and natural resources continue to be major areas where the Liberals will have to act quickly to stem the tide of Western alienation, Baldwin said.

The results of the election which saw the Conservatives take 49 of the 58 Western seats compared with 18 for the Liberals — indicated the West "has had enough of such pseudo-national and Eastern-dominated organizations as the CBC, whose Toronto-based dlique engages in patronizing put-downs of the West."

He accused the CBC of "blatatant partisanship" during the election campaign and suggested the corporation should have a section "that is more oriented to the Western point of view," perhaps in a form similar to Radio-Canada, the French-language CBC.

Baldwin said, the growing feeling of Western alienation and separatist sentiment is not especially marked with Conservative ranks.

Phoenix Players' Musical Fantasy Completes Bill

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

Anyone who has seen and loved The Fantastiks will love Celebration, the musical fantasy that opened Monday at the Phoenix Theatre on the University of Victoria campus.

It is the third production to join the Phoenix Players' repertory season and alternating with Last of the Red Hot Lovers and Hotel Baltimore, completes the summer's three-part program.

Writers of the super-successful Fantastiks — Tom Jones and Harvey Schmidt — have put together a concoction from the same recipe.

Take a lot of imagination — ours as well as theirs — a good dollop of romance, a snifter of heady idealism, add a sprinkle of comedy and bake.

The result is once more airy off-beat charm, the evocation of a dream world. But this dream world is more hallucinatory, its comedy is less spontaneous and its core idealism — the corrupt miseries of material wealth and power in constrast to the joys of nature and simple poverty — is thumped home without subtlty.

The pleasures of this production are visual, thanks to skillful direction by Harvey Miller, scintillating costumes and effective lighting.

Its strenghs are a fine comedy performance by John Krich as the ogre-like Mr. Rich, the firm experienced support of Marge Adelberg at the piano which helped a non-singing cast to get through the musical numbers without serious catastrophe, and a quantity of appealing young acting talent.

Winston Morgan has a special quality, an empathy that was apparent in Hotel Baltimore but that comes out from behind the cloud of that subdued role to shine with gentle warmth in Celebration.

Another strong performance is given by Tony Bancroft. His role calls for him to be the deux ex machina; a mixture of tempter, wheeler-dealer, fairy godfather and magician.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 45-year-old man who put back the items he stole from a car before he was arrested received a suspended sentence and six months' probation in provincial court Monday.

Richard Ferris Pollard, of 2630 Quadra, pleaded guilty to theft under $200. Pollard took two stereo speakers and a side rear view mirror from a car parked at an Esquimalt beer parlour.

Macdonald said Pollard told police he put the items back in the car when he realized he had "done wrong."

In traffic court on impaired charges, Lorne Patrick Chadney, 18, of no fixed address, was fined $300 and banned from driving for 30 days. Stephen Norman Middleton, 19, of RR1 Shawnigan Lake, was fined $400 and given a 45-day suspension, and William Henry Curran Warren, 34, of 832 Darwin who was fined $350 for impaired driving less than a year ago was given a 20-day sentence to be served on weekends, placed on probation and banned from driving for eight months.

Horseman, Copter, Plane Rescue Girl

A horseman and a helicopter combined to bring a 14-year-old Vancouver girl out of a rugged interior high meadow where she had fallen and injured herself.

A Pacific Rescue Centre spokesman in Victoria said today Jean Bulman was on a trail ride Monday with a group of people on the slopes of 9,400-foot Mount Warner, 100 miles west of Lillooet, when she fell from her horse and broke her collar bone.

A member of the party rode 5½ hours to the tiny community of Gold Bridge for help.

There he managed to contact the rescue centre which dispatched a Labrador helicopter from Comox.

While he was waiting, he asked the owner of a small float plane to fly in a message to the girl that help was on the way.

The pilot siphoned gas from his plane to lighten the load for high elevation flying.

He reached the party, which had stopped by a lake at the 5,000-foot mark, and was on his way back when he ran out of gas and was forced to crash land.

Fortunately the helicopter passed directly over him and he was spotted by the rescue crew waving for assistance. He was not injured.

The girl was taken to Vancouver for treatment and is reported in good condition.

Tomato Growers Subsidized

An income assurance scheme for field-grown tomatoes has been worked out between the provincial government and the tomato committee of the B.C. Federation of Agriculture.

This is the fourth income assurance scheme set up under new provincial legislation and, according to the agriculture department, both sides are optimistic the scheme will renew tomato production in the interior.

The scheme is voluntary and only growers marketing through the B.C. Interior Vegetable Marketing Board will be eligible. All eligible growers are now in the Okanagan area but both sides hope tomatoes may again be grown in the Kamloops and Ashcroft areas.

Participants will be assured of a stable income for five years through a guaranteed return on the cost of production.

If the price drops below the level of the guarantee, an indemnity will be paid out of the program and in 1974 that guaranteed price is set at 21.4 cents per pound for fresh market tomatoes and 3.25 cents per pound for cannery tomatoes.

Growers will pay premiums of ⅛ of a cent per pound to the plan and the government will pay in ¼ of a cent per pound.

Tomatoes sold in roadside stands are not covered by the plan.

Strike at Autopac?

WINNIPEG (CP) — About 68 per cent of government employees at Autopac claims centres throughout the province have voted to strike in support of pay demands. The 450 employees rejected an offered wage increase of 7.5 per cent over two years. Wages now range upwards from $2.25 an hour.

HAIR SPRAY HIJACK WEAPON?

LONDON (Reuter) — Women passengers at London's Heathrow airport had their hair spray aerosol cans confiscated by security police Monday because it is believed the cans can be used as flamethrowers to hijack airplanes.

Airport police collected about 300 cans of hair spray and fly-killer in a surprise security exercise which also brought in troops and armored cars.

An official said it has been demonstrated that the cans can be as lethal as small bombs.

Turk Intervention Threat for Cyprus

Times News Services

Turkey called on Britain today to join it in intervening in Cyprus and said it would go it alone if the U.K. refused to help.

Heavy fighting was reported in Nicosia again today.

Archbishop Makarios, ousted Cypriot president, is "sound and well" and was seen today by two senior United Nations representatives in the town of Paphos, a UN spokesman announced, in New York.

Developments on the island indicate Turkey and Greece once again might be approaching a war over Cyprus as in 1964 and 1967.

In London, Foreign Secretary James Callaghan announced in the Commons today that Makarios has been allowed refuge in the sovereign British base area on the island.

Makarios later left Cyprus for an unknown destination. Some authorities speculate he may be heading for a special session of the United Nations Security Council.

Callaghan also said that Britain has urged the Greek government to recall Greek officers of the National Guard "at the earliest possible moment."

Under the 1960 treaty guaranteeing the independence of Cyprus, the guarantors — Britain, Greece and Turkey — can intervene jointly or unilaterally against any threat to the island's status quo.

The British government may have to decide in the next few hours whether to invoke Article IV of the Treaty of Guarantee and send in the army and the Royal Air Force against the Greek-led military junta.

The decision depends on whether Turkish Prime Minister Bulent Ecevit orders his armed forces into action under the treaty.

Turkey had put all her forces on full alert Monday night, with 61 naval vessels cruising between Greece and Cyprus, army units ready for embarkation as they were in the crisis of 1954 and 1967, and air squadrons only 25 minutes' flying time from the north coast of Cyprus.

Officials in Whitehall Monday night were ordered to say nothing about the contents of the "urgent messages" sent in the foreign secretary's name during the afternoon to the foreign ministers of Greece and Turkey.

Copies were also sent to UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim.

British political sources said it was virtually unthinkable that Britain should get militarily involved in Cyprus on top of her Ulster commitment.

Sources said Britain is anxious to avoid at all cost direct involvement in the crisis and is trying to cool the situation through intensified diplomatic pressure on the Greek and Turkish governments.

Makarios today appealed in a broadcast monitored in Tel Aviv to the superpowers, to all friendly countries and all peaceful people to support the Cypriot nation in its struggle for independence, its sovereignity, its democratic rights and its refusal to submit to the "Greek dictatorship."

Speaking in English, he made the appeal over the radio station at Paphos.

Callaghan also told the Commons:

"It appears that the National Guard are at present in control of parts of the island and that fighting continues among the Cypriot population, although the Turkish population is not at present involved."

Makarios, in his broadcast, said, however, loyalist forces were in control of Limassol, the nation's second largest city, where they "have taken charge of the situation and overcome the subversive forces of fascism."

"We will continue to fight against these people and are supported by our friends," Makarios said.

A British foreign office spokesman said Britain still recognizes Makarios as president of Cyprus.

The rebel-held Nicosia radio said today five cabinet ministers were sworn in today as part of a new government for the island.

12-FLOOR FALL THEN A DRINK

VANCOUVER (CP) — A window-cleaner fell 12 storeys Monday from an apartment building, bounced off a parked car, then recuperated with a drink in the apartment manager's suite.

Norm Lawrence, 23, was working on the top floor of the Del Charro Apartments, when a knot in the rope connecting his platform to a pulley came loose.

He hit the roof of a car parked near a door at the side of the building and bounced from there to the ground. His only injuries were a cut on the head and a sore ankle and Lawrence said he believes the sore ankle came in the fall from the roof of the car to the ground.

Eleanor Bolam, manager of the building, said she gave Lawrence a drink and refused to allow him to return to work until today.

"I wanted to go back to work, but she sent me home," Lawrence said. "I felt like a school kid."

As he fell, Lawrence said, he saw he was going to hit pavement and used his feet to push himself away from the side of the building. The parked car now has a dent about four feet long, three feet wide and seven or eight inches deep in the roof, he said.

One of his main concerns now is whether the Insurance Corporation of B.C. will pay for what he estimates as about $300 damage to the car.

"I really can't afford to pay for it myself. I'm just starting out in my business."

Canada In Space Program

OTTAWA (CP) — Expansion of government space policy, including possible participation in the United States shuttle program, was announced today by Science Minister Jeanne Sauve.

The main element of the policy redefinition is improvement of the capacity of Canadian industry to design and build domestic space systems, the minister said in a statement.

That would be achieved by switching research now done by government agencies over to industry, and by farming out new projects to industry.

Canadian space policy has been based largely on communications projects — the Anik satellites, for example.

It now is being expanded to include such projects as the U.S.-based Earth Resources Technology Satellite (ERTS), in which Canada already participates.

Mrs. Sauve said the National Research Council is discussing Canadian involvement in the space shuttle with the U.S. National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA).

The exact form any participation might take has not been settled, she said.

The shuttle is based on a reusable manned launch vehicle and servicing of satellites in orbit.

The government has authorized $1 million to finance studies of the project, but Canadian participation could cost $35 million, depending on the share the government takes, sources said.

NASA and the government also are jointly engaged in the five-year, $56-million development of the Communications Technology Satellite, to be launched in 1975.

'Save Crystal' Lottery Sought

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

A city-run lottery to finance the restoration of the old Crystal Garden building was suggested today by Ald. Sam Bawlf.

He told city aldermen if Vancouver could use that means to try to save its Orpheum Theatre, Victoria could do the same for the Crystal.

By means of a lottery and perhaps a grant from the provincial government toward capital costs, Bawlf said he was "confident" the city could find enough to rejuvenate the building.

The city's public works committee didn't say yea or nay to the suggestion, but meanwhile it accepted Bawlf's suggestion that a special committee be struck to study the whole question of bringing back some shine to the Crystal's lacklustre dereliction.

The committee will be headed by Ald. Mike Young, with Bawlf, Ald. Alf Hood and Ald. Percy Frampton as members. Its first meeting was set for mid-August.

Bawlf said the need for action was prompted by the provincial government's indication that it has no interest in either the Crystal building or the site, despite earlier signs that the government was considering the development of a downtown transit centre there.

While capital costs were important, he said, of more "vital concern" was the question whether the new-style Crystal could be operated without placing a heavy burden on taxpayers.

Bawlf reiterated an earlier proposal that the upper promenade of the building could be an arboretum, while the lower areas could be given over to a variety of "recreationally-oriented commercial uses."

The arboretum, he said, might be operated by the Butchart's Gardens establishment in conjunction with their Central Saanich attraction.

Young agreed no time should be lost in studying the matter, as the Crystal is "an asset that's wasting."

Besides provincial interest in the Crystal in recent months, a few entrepreneurs have been studying commercial development prospects for the building. One of them is believed to be thinking in terms of a dolphin pool attraction.

PAIR ESCAPE SECOND TIME IN TWO DAYS

HOPE (CP) — Police with tracking dogs are searching for Cecil Logan and Gordon Campbell today following their second escape in two days from jail here.

An RCMP spokesman said the pair escaped at 5:30 a.m. using a hacksaw to go through the bars of the bullpen and out one of the cell-block windows.

On Monday, the pair were recaptured after an escape Sunday night. It took less than six hours to get them back into custody.

Campbell, 28, was charged with attempted murder after a man arrested on an attempted theft charge last week, shot at but missed an RCMP officer during the arrest.

Logan, 29, was in jail on a conspiracy charge.

Both have also been charged with escaping custody in connection with the Sunday breakout.

Nixon Aides Probed Taxes

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — The House of Representatives Judiciary Committee today released evidence that the White House sought to create tax problems for Democrats and favorable tax treatment for its friends.

In the process, according to a 440-page report, it looked into the confidential tax status of assorted "politically active" movie stars.

The report — which drew no final conclusions — was the latest installment to be released by the committee of evidence gathered in its closed-door impeachment inquiry.

The report also claimed that John D. Ehrlichman chewed out the chief of the Internal Revenue Service for a "crappy job in 1972 when a White House-instigated audit failed to turn up any tax cheating by then-Democratic chairman Lawrence O'Brien.

"I wanted them to turn up something and send him (O'Brien) to jail before the election and unfortunately it didn't materialize," Ehrlichman was quoted as saying.

The report included affidavits from two former IRS directors who told the committee about pressures from White House aides to force the tax agency to obey their instructions.

The evidence also desclosed that John Caulfield, a former treasury department and White House aide, regularly obtained confidential IRS information from Vernon Acree, the assistnat commissioner for inspection for IRS.

An affidavit given the committee by Randolph Thrower, a former IRS director, on May 24, 1974, disclosed that Thrower had asked Acree in 1970 "to investigate the possibility of an unlawful disclosure of confidential tax information" to columnist Jack Anderson.

In a related development, former presidential aide Charles Colson told newsmen Monday after appearing for nine hours before the judiciary committee that he believed Nixon did not know "in advance" of the burglary at the office Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist.

'Better Use' For Posters

Liberal and Conservative candidate campaign signs were more useful as material for a carport than for their intended use, the accused told a provincial court judge Monday.

Allan Wilson, 41, of Duncan, explained in Duncan provincial court he took the elections signs during the recent campaign because "I was building a carport and thought they could be put to better use."

His actions had no political overtones, Wilson said.

Judge Lance Heard granted a conditional discharge after six months probation.

Two-Thirds IWA Back on Job

About two-thirds of the 32,000 coast woodworkers are back at work today, easing the province's largest industry back into full productivity.

Some 9,000 members of the International Woodworkers of America, including 400 employees of a Victoria plywood mill — are still off the job, despite wishes of union officials who reached a tentative agreement with the forest industry last week.

Most workers are expected to return to their jobs later this week, but employees of the B.C. Forest Product's plywood division at Gorge Road have voted to stay off the job until the new contract results are known July 31.

Only maintenance staff returned to Sooke Forest Products today. They will be joined by production workers in five days, after equipment breakdowns experienced during the firms last shift are righted.

A spokesman for the IWA local 1-118 in Victoria reported some 500 employees returned to B.C. Forest Products' sawmill division on Garbally Road today and the 250 employees moved into operation at Victoria Plywood at midnight Monday.

Employees at Butler Bros. at Sooke and Canada Puget Sound Co. workers at Jordan River returned to work at 8 a.m. today.

In Duncan 5,059 members of Local 1-80 voted to return to work Wednesday. Woodworkers agreed at a meeting Monday that it would be "sheer folly" for members to continue to lose wages pending the outcome of the settlement vote.

A union spokesman would not predict if the return-to-work would be hampered by members of a rank-and-file committee centred in Nanaimo that erected pickets Monday around all but one operation in the Duncan area.

"I can't predict what action will be taken, but they'll be responsible for taking wages out of the pockets of workers if they do. The responsibility rests entirely on the shoulders of the rank and file group."

IWA regional president Jack Munro visited the Duncan local Monday afternoon after reports of pickets and said the group has no authority, whatsoever, to speak for union members.

Manitoba Drivers Hit Back

WINNIPEG (CP) — Motorists who are annoyed at the way other people drive in Manitoba now can do more than just mutter or curse.

The provincial government has hired four students for the summer to accept complaints, in writing or by telephone, about drivers.

However, only those complainants who are willing to have their names and addresses recorded will have their complaints registered.

The registered owner of a car that prompted the complaint will receive a letter, telling him a complaint has been filed.

Under the temporary program, acceptable complaints may be about incidents of illegal, unsafe or simply discourteous driving.

The letter will ask the owner to draw the matter to the attention of the person who was driving the car at the time.

Highways Minister Peter Burtniak said the recipient of the letter is welcome to discuss it with the Motor Vehicle Branch.

Burtniak, who announced the program Monday, indicated that no action would be taken beyond the letter or discussion stage.

Dog-Overboard Finds Owner

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

The mystery of how a dog ended up fighting for her life in the middle of the Gulf of Georgia has been solved.

The dog — a friendly four-year-old German Shepherd — was rescued on the eve of the Victoria-Maui race when John Long's Sea Ray was on her way over from Vancouver for the start of the ocean classic.

The crew spotted her, picked her up, dried her out and took her to Cranston's Animal Hospital on Douglas.

After being treated for exposure, the dog was taken to the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals' shelter on Napier Lane.

How did she end up floundering in the sea in the vicinity of Point Grey?

The mystery was solved Monday afternoon.

A friend of her owner, who has one of her pups, claimed her.

Chris Maloney, like the rescued dog's owner, is a commercial fisherman.

He said her master, who has a cabin at Haney, was on the way out to sea again.

His boat was being pitched around in heavy seas.

He didn't notice his pet being washed over the side until it was too late.

Maloney has radioed the dog's owner, who is still at sea, and a joyful reunion with his pet is planned on his return to port.

Maloney recognized his friend's pet in a story and picture carried in Saturday's Times. He had put in with his boat at Sidney.

He got in touch with the SPCA.

For the last 10 days the SPCA had been trying to trace the dog's owner through their counterparts in Vancouver and Vancouver radio stations. Nobody came forward.

An SPCA official said, "It was sheer luck — or something — that brought Mr. Maloney into Sidney."

TOURIST ALERT ON PAGE 29

Guerrilla Bombs Hit Bike Race

SAINT LARY SOULAN, France (UPI) — Spanish anarchists bombed support vehicles of the Tour de France cycling classic today and later set fire to 13 cars in the Roman Catholic pilgrim town of Lourdes, police said.

There were no injuries.

Three separate plastic explosions destroyed or damaged six cars and a motorcycle, including the photo laboratory of the French News Agency here.

Leaflets signed by the Groups of International Revolutionary Action (GARI) denounced "Spanish Fascism" and the Catholic Church and demanded release of political prisoners. GARI is the group whjch recently kidnapped, then freed, the Spanish director of a Paris bank, Angel Baltasar Suarez.

The group ordered Spanish riders to drop out of the tour or face undefined reprisals. "The actions tonight were only a warning," the leaflets said.

Tour official Felix Levitan said: "We do not underestimate the threats, but we will not bow to blackmail."

EMERY QUITS

Times News Services

VANCOUVER — Vancouver Art Gallery director Tony Emery has quit the position he has held for the past five years and departed on a cruise timed to coincide with the announcement of his resignation.

Gallery president Roy Jessiman said that money was not an issue in Emery's departure, although the gallery and Emery had been deadlocked in salary negotiaions since January.

According to a gallery vice-president Robin Mayor — a close personal friend of Emery's — the resignation was "the culmination of a lot of little things.

Sometimes a lot of little things become compounded into one big thing," he added.

Mayor indicated that there had been personality clashes between Emery and some of the 20 members of the gallery's board of directors.

WASHINGTON DUO FINALLY SURRENDERS

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Two convicts who had seized eight hostages in a bid for freedom stripped off their clothes, laid down their weapons and put handcuffs on each other Monday night after police foiled their final attempt to escape through a basement airduct.

Then Frank Gorham, 26, and Robert Jones, 24, surrendered to assistant police chief Maurice Cullinane, who said he gained their trust during the five-day siege at the U.S. district courthouse that began Thursday afternoon.

The two were flown to a maximum security federal prison in Atlanta.

Gorham and Jones had been inside the cellblock since Thursday when they seized eight hostages and tried to bargain for a freedom flight to Africa.

They released one of the hostages Friday and held the others until the seven fled Sunday in a daring escape engineered by one, a deputy U.S. marshal.

The final act of the drama began about 9 p.m. EDT Monday when they used an axe to hack their way into the air duct. For the first time since Gorham and Jones had barricaded themselves inside the basement lockup, officers exchanged gunfire with the pair, then used tear gas to force them back into their confinement.

No one was hurt.

Keeping Saanich Kids On Straight, Narrow

Riding down the straight and narrow line are youngsters taking the summer safe bicycling course at the Saanich police station parking lot. Constable Barrie Kidd and assistant Cheryl Hoyte, with clipboard, have their eyes on the rider in checkered pants who couldn't quite stay in line. The exercise is to train more than 450 children between nine and 14 who registered for the courses to ride straight in heavy traffic. The courses are offered in three two-hour sessions.

French Bill Step Closer

QUEBEC (CP) — The controversial official language bill passed second reading — approval in principle — Monday with opposition to the legislation in Liberal ranks whittled down to two members.

On a recorded vote John Ciaccia and George Springate joined the Parti Quebecois and Creditistes in voting against the government, which won the vote 80-10.

After the vote, Ciaccia told reporters he hopes to attend sessions of the assembly's education committee, which now takes over clause-by-clause study of the legislation, although he is not a committee member.

He said he did not expect reprisals for having bolted the party line, but Springate said disciplinary measures could be taken against him.

Ciaccia said he could not vote for the bill because, in his opinion, parts of it are illegal, it does not sufficiently recognize the rights of English Quebecers to English schools, and it gives too much power to a bureaucracy which does not reflect the ethnic makeup of the province.

U.K. Furore Flares On Test-Tube Tots

HULL, England (Reuter) — A controversy blew up among medical researchers today over an eminent British professor's statement that the world's first test-tube babies have been born and are thriving.

Other specialists in the field said they know nothing of the births and angrily challenged him to produce more details.

But the man who broke the news Monday, Prof. Douglas Bevis of Leeds University, stayed silent. A secretary said the university has been inundated with telephone calls but the professor is refusing to speak to the press.

Bevis, 55, announced that three test tube babies have been born—one in England and two in West Europe. He said the mothers' eggs had been removed, fertilized with their husbands' sperm in a laboratory and then implanted in the womb.

He said the oldest child now is about 18 months old and all three are in good health with no sign of abnormality. He refused to give any further details, saying privacy was essential for the children and he was not involved in the operations anyway.

"I am astounded that Prof. Bevis should have made this statement," said Patrick Steptoe, a Manchester gynecologist who, along with a Cambridge University scientist, Dr. Robert Edwards, has pioneered research in this field for the last five years.

"As far as I know, no one in this country or anywhere else has yet succeeded in this technique," Steptoe said.

"I feel very angry indeed about this because all that will happen is that thousands of childless women will be plunged into an immediate state of anxiety . . . Prof. Bevis must now justify his comments."

Bevis and his team at Leeds University have long been rivals of Steptoe and Edwards.

In 1969, the latter pair announced the first successful fertilization of a human egg in a test tube. Dr. Bevis achieved the same result some weeks later.

At Cambridge, Dr. Edwards also reacted hotly to the Bevis statement.

"I assume the mother must be a patient of Dr. Bevis as he has announced it," he said. "If he has done it, give him my congratulations.

"If he hasn't, I want to know what the heck he is getting up and spouting about."

Observers said that as privacy is such a vital consideration in this field, denials were perhaps inevitable. There was even speculation that Bevis's own team may have been involved despite his assertions to the contrary.

Argentine Violence Flares

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — A renewed outbreak of political shootings has presented Isabel Peron with her first major crisis since becoming president of Argentina.

Four assassins burst into a suburban restaurant Monday and sprayed bullets into the back of Arturo Mor Roig, interior minister in the former military regime and architect of the elections that put a Peronist government in power.

Police killed one of Mor Roig's murderers and arrested a second in a shootout with occupants of the getaway car stopped a few hours after the assassination.

The murder of Mor Roig, 59, came a week after unidentified gunmen shot and seriously wounded Leandro Salato, a ranking official of the ministry of social welfare.

Salata is a close associate of Jose Lopez Rega, who served as personal secretary to the late Juan Peron and holds the same job under his widow.

Last week, a Leftist woman follower of Peron was raped and murdered, reportedly by members of a rightest Peronist group.

Mor Roig was at least the 42nd victim of political assassination in the last ten months in Argentina.

Nixon Fires Aid Chief

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon has fired the head of the Office of Economic Opportunity for trying to save some of the programs the president wants abolished.

Alvin Arnett said Nixon adviser Dean Burch called him Monday afternoon and "requested my resignation to become official at 10 a.m. Tuesday. His line was that the president does not want OEO and that I have been accused of lobbying to continue the agency."

The resignation will become effective July 31, and Arnett will be replaced by OEO general counsel Burt Gallegos, acting deputy director of the agency under Arnett's predecessor, Howard Phillips, who was forced out of office by a federal judge for trying to kill the agency without congressional approval.

Arnett said he had fought against Nixon's plan to abolish the agency "because I've been concerned about the programs for the poor."

are a certain number of senators to vote (against conviction if he is impeached) and so he's giving them what they want."

One a congressional source said the firing was "impeachment politics" on Nixon's part.

Asked if he thought impeachment was behind his ouster, Arnett said "I've heard that too, for weeks."

Who else could it be?" asked the source who refused to be identified. "Everyone knows OEO is dead but there

HUNTING RAPIST, GROUP SLAYS MAN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Louis Sisler, a lobbyist for the National Rifle Association, has died of gunshot wounds inflicted by persons who claimed to be looking for a rapist, police said.

Sisler, 48, answered the door of his father-in-law's home about 11 p.m. Saturday.

"We're looking for the guy who raped our sister," one member of the group told Sisler.

"I'm sorry, you must have the wrong house," Sisler replied.

When he tried to close the door, the assailants fired several shots through the screen door. One, a shotgun blast, fore a hole several inches wide in the wooden door.

Choquette Denies Lanctot Rumors

QUEBEC (CP) — Justice Minister Jerome Choquette Monday denied radio reports that Jacques Lanctot, one of the men involved in the 1970 kidnapping of British trade minister James Cross, has returned to Canada.

Lanctot has been living in Cuba since Cross was released in return for a safe conduct out of Canada, but was recently reported to be in Paris along with Yves Langlois and Jean-Marc Carbonneau, two other men involved in the kidnapping.

Choquette, replying to a question from Camil Samson, Creditiste member for Rouyn-Noranda, told the national assembly there was no foundation to reports Lanctot was in Canada.

"I have inquired of police authorities and their investigations have revealed that this news is false," he said. "It is in fact based on an anonymous telephone call to a radio station."

Radio station CFCF in Montreal said in a report Saturday that Lanctot might have arrived in Canada using a false passport.

Montreal Urban Community police and RCMP spokesmen earlier said they could not comment on the radio reports.

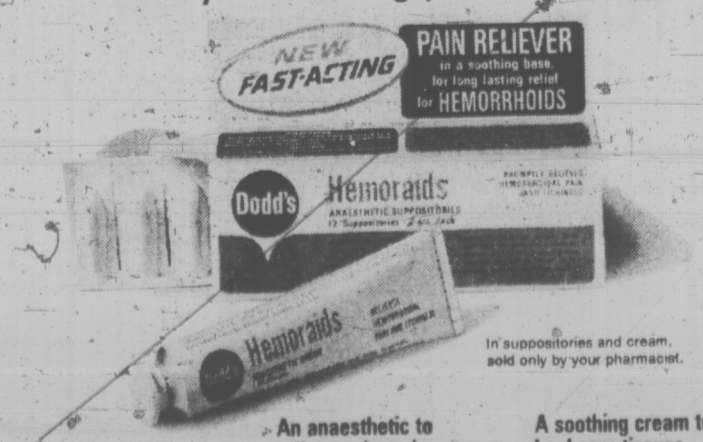
A diverse program of classical and contemporary ballet will be presented tonight at McPherson Playhouse at 8 by the Oakland Ballet, a rapidly growing San Francisco Bay area company currently on a tour which includes official appearance at Expo '74. The program includes a ballet based on Tennessee Williams' A Streetcar Named Desire.

The Victoria Association of Practising Artists will hold its art show July 29 to Aug. 3, at the Hillside Shopping Centre. The brainchild of several Yates Street artists during Victorian Days, the association intends to foster friendship among artists and organize public displays of work.

New Hemoraids for hemorrhoids.

When you're suffering, you need help fast.



In suppositories and cream, sold only by your pharmacist.

Two way action to do one job well.

New Hemoraids' anaesthetic relieves pain and irritation quickly, relaxing muscular tension so natural healing can take place. Meantime, the rich cream gently soothes and lubricates irritated tissues.

An anaesthetic to relieve pain and itch fast.

New Hemoraids' water-soluble anaesthetic—Diperodon Hydrochloride—easily spreads long-lasting relief directly into sore tissues by combining with natural, protective body moisture. This helps Hemoraids' smooth cream to effectively coat the irritated area. Pain and itch are quickly relieved.

A soothing cream to heal sore tissues quickly.

New Hemoraids carries its anaesthetic in a soft-textured cream which can be spread over the most sensitive tissues without additional discomfort. And this soothing, cooling cream, in itself, has valuable healing properties. In suppository form, Hemoraids melts quickly and easily, becoming a gentle, healing cream.

New Hemoraids: when you need help fast.

TODAY'S GRAIN PRICES

WINNIPEG (CP) — Prices were mixed in active trading today on the Winnipeg Commodity Exchange.

Flax moved erratically, moving up the 30-cent limit before closing mixed, with July and October futures a few cents lower and the deferred months posting sizable gains.

Vancouver rapeseed prices advanced their 20-cent limits, while Thunder Bay futures made smaller gains.

Rye was down its 15-cent limit in several contract months.

CHICAGO (AP) — Soybean futures closed with a limit gain of 20 cents a bushel higher on the Board of Trade today but profit-taking hit other pits in the closing minutes.

It was the third straight day that soybeans had advanced 20 cents a bushel. Under Board rules, the limit in the soybean pit Wednesday will be expanded by 50 per cent to 30 cents a bushel, up or down.

The early demand in soybeans and in soybean oil lifted prices to limit higher. Corn futures also advanced the limit, 10 cents a bushel. It was apparent that the buying was still associated with government figures in July of smaller crops than previously forecast. But some trade later developed in all the pits.

Profit-taking, however, hit wheat and corn in the closing minutes and three options fell the limit of 20 cents.

Corn futures also weakened at the close but the nearby expiring July option closed with a gain. Deferred options were down as much as 4 cents. Oats trade was largely local but prices moved in the direction of corn, closing lower.

At the close, soybeans were up 20 cents, July 6.81½; Chicago wheat 13 to 20 lower, July

DRILLS TURN

Coincidence it could have been, but a workman this morning was never more than inches away from a power unit for drilling equipment on a Government Street construction site. The firm's manager and part-owner, Herb Krenbrink, claimed Monday expensive damage was caused to the equipment when Government Street businessmen Don Randle and Jack McKenzie took turns switching off the power because they were miffed at the noise nuisance. Randle went to City Hall Monday but was told by city solicitor Jakob de Villiers Victoria is powerless to stop the drilling noise as it doesn't contravene the city's noise bylaw. Randle, manager of the New England Hotel, complained the noise made sleep impossible for night workers who stay at his establishment. He threatened to cut the switch again today . . . which could explain the presence of that hovering workman.

HEY KIDS! WE'RE HERE TO HELP YOU HAVE FUN!

A summer recreation project for Fernwood area children has found itself short of youngsters.

Recreation Summer '74, a five-man Opportunities for Youth project funded by an $8,100 federal grant, has 15 children in its summer program now but would like to have as many as 60.

The five workers organize hiking, basketball, soccer, swimming and other activities for children from age 8 to 15 every weekday from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

They have taken kids on overnight camping trips, supplying food and tents, and on hiking trips in Thetis Lake Park.

Worker Carol Rathbeber said the group would organize weekend activities as well if any children were interested.

Fernwood area children looking for something to do this summer are invited to join the project by coming to the playground of Victoria High School near the tennis courts, any day between 9:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m.

Parents may also come to discuss the project with the workers, or may phone Carol after 5:30 p.m. at 385-4780. The children pay nothing.

20,000 Added To Voters Lists

At least 20,000 persons have been added to municipal voter lists in Greater Victoria following recent enumerations using new eligibility requirements.

The total could pass 30,000 before registration closes at the end of August.

In Victoria alone the enumeration added about 14,000 names and the total in Saanich is not known yet.

New provincial regulations now base eligibility to vote in municipal elections entirely on residency rather than land ownership.

Corporations and absentee landlords lose their municipal vote under the new rules. Residents, whether tenant or landlord, can vote on all municipal questions, including money bylaws.

All municipalities in B.C. were required to complete voter enumerations by the end of June.

In Esquimalt, about 3,900 names have been added to the voter list, bringing it to 7,500, and in Oak Bay, 1,624 have been added so far to bring the total to 11,566.

The addition of 14,000 to the Victoria list brings it to 36,000. In Saanich, where last year's total was 33,000, the new list is still being processed in a date centre but the total is known to be higher.

Basic qualifications to vote in municipal elections remain the same as for provincial elections — at least 19 years of age, being a Canadian citizen or a British subject resident in Canada for a year and in B.C. for six months.

SAFE PLACES TO SWIM

A list of 21 swimming spots declared free of pollution has been released by the office of the capital district community health services.

Shoreline locations around Saanich, Victoria, Oak Bay and Esquimalt on the clean list include:

Victoria waterfront except at Clover Point and the bays on each side of it: the Oak Bay waterfront except the east side of Gonzales Bay; the Esquimalt waterfront, including Esquimalt Lagoon; Cadboro Bay, Mount Douglas Park and Portage Inlet beach opposite Craigflower school.

On the Saanich Peninsula, approved locations include the Sidney waterfront except at the foot of Ocean Avenue, Patricia Bay, Sayward Beach, Coles Bay, Braeman Beach, Prospect, Elk and Beaver Lakes.

Approved sites west of Victoria include Matheson Lake, Weir's Beach, Florence Lake, Langford Lake, Glen Lake and Thetis Lake.

FLASH FIRE IN MILL

B.C. Forest Products, whose operations in Victoria were stopped by a four-day strike, started back to work today with a bang — a flash fire in the steam line.

A spokesman for the company said the fire, which broke out at 12:15 a.m. today, was confined to the hot press area and was believed to have been started in debris lying against a pipe carrying steam.

Fire department officials are still investigating, but estimate damage at about $2,500.

The fire didn't delay resumption of operations in the sawmill division this morning.

In other fire calls, Miss Vivian Lane of 6-1731 Cook suffered minor leg burns when wax she was heating on her stove overheated and exploded, setting fire to cupboards.

Damage was estimated at $200.

City to Study Housing Needs

Two measures to study the extent of Greater Victoria's housing needs were suggested to Victoria's housing committee today.

Ald. Sam Bawlf suggested the Capital Regional District be urged to retain a consulting firm which would obtain from each municipality and area data for a comprehensive "overview" of the housing situation.

And Ald. Mike Young said the Landlord and Tenant Advisory Bureau, with its specialist knowledge of the whole rental housing field, be asked to undertake its own survey as a kind of swan-song before the bureau's function is superseded by the new provincial Rentalsman's office.

"In view of the fact that they are destined for extinction it might be a good project for them before they disappear," he said.

Bawlf said a "serious appraisal of our housing predicament" in this area was long overdue, and asked Ald. Alf Hood if anything on this had been tackled at the regional level.

"The answer is no," replied Hood, who said regional involvement in the housing field was suggested about a year ago but little had been done.

Colin Crisp, assistant to the city manager, said he understood the provincial housing department had recently established a research function would become readily available publicly because of its politically undesirable conclusions."

He said he thought the provincial government was "swamped" with the sheer magnitude of B.C.'s housing problems and "its inability to significantly alter the housing situation."

20-Second Saving

To save motorists 20 seconds' waiting time and a lot of frustration, the city of Victoria will spend $43,300 on installing new traffic signal equipment at the notoriously busy Humber Green intersection of Douglas and Hillside.

The actual allocation was made some months ago in the city's 1974 budget, but the public works and traffic committee today boosted the estimate by another $9,300 from the $34,000 originally provided, to allow for increased equipment costs.

Enthusiastic about the advantages of the new signal controller, traffic engineer Dave Campbell said it will reduce red-light delays in peak periods by about 20 seconds, cutting the 2-min., 40-sec. cycle to 2 mins., 20 sec.

Kiwanis Unfair At Elk—Firm

Mr. and Mrs. Ken Wallace of the Elk Lake Burger House claim the Kiwanis Club is giving them unfair competition and running them out of business.

The competition comes from a Kiwanis concession near them at the lake.

They are also concerned about another Kiwanis stand, planned for Eagle Park at the south end of the lake.

Through a letter from their lawyer W. C. McKechnie, the Wallaces appealed to Saanich council Monday asking them to restrict the operations of the Kiwanis stand.

The Wallaces claim competition from the Kiwanis club is unfair because the club pays no taxes, while they pay $4,089 in property taxes; the club is not responsible for cleaning up the surrounding grounds and, because of its low overhead, can afford to operate only in the prime season.

In McKechnie's letter, the Wallaces also claim the Kiwanis sublets the stand to a professional cater and has little interest in it beyond making a profit.

Asking that items sold at the Kiwanis stand be restricted, McKechnie told council:

"It would be quite acceptable if the concessions sold pop, candy, ice cream novelties, potato chips and so on, but any venture which provides french fries, hamburgers or soft ice cream can only be at the expense of the Wallaces' operation."

Saanich, legislative committee will investigate the matter.

A municipal official said today the Kiwanis had not sublet the concessions but had a management agreement with a caterer on a profit-sharing basis. The Kiwanis would receive $4,000 of the profits made this year.

Under an agreement with the Capital Regional District, the CRD issues leases in the park and Saanich is responsible for its maintenance and the provision of lifeguards.

Any alterations in conditions of leasing, he said, would involve the CRD as well as Saanich.

Kiwanian K. O. Moore said today the club had no intention of causing unfair competition to any businessman.

"We are not out to undermine any businessman," Moore said, "We are providing a service to the park with the co-operation of Saanich and the district."

Moore said the Kiwanis stand was near the beach in the trees away from the Wallaces' concession.

He said they had added soft cream and hot dogs to their concession about two years ago "because people were demanding it."

Escaper Back To San Quentin

Today William Clarence Robertson is going "home" . . . San Quentin prison in California.

And he's travelling under his real name . . . Neil Edward Darrow.

Darrow escaped from San Quentin June 12 while serving a life sentence without parole for murdering his wife and robbing a bank with intent to murder. He was flown today in a special charter plane under heavy guard from Victoria to Seattle.

He will then be transferred to the care of California state correction officials.

Darrow was ordered deported Monday in an immigration hearing.

Darrow entered Canada on foot near Rossland. He is believed to have arrived in Victoria late last week.

The charge of carrying concealed weapons — a dagger with a 10-inch blade and five letter openers converted to throwing knives — was withdrawn by Judge William Ostler in provincial court Monday to allow the deportation of Darrow.

Police arrested him Thursday after receiving complaints that a man was throwing knives on a downtown street.

Darrow's real identity was discovered Friday in a routine fingerprint check in Ottawa.

AN UN-BURGLARY

A Saanich man's staged theft of his own home brought him a $250 fine in Victoria Provincial court Monday.

George Richard Holland, 21, of 953 Dunn, phoned police July 3 to say his home had been burglarized and two color television sets, a stereo set, and other items stolen.

Police were given a list of items worth $2,516 that were supposedly stolen.

But nine days later, Holland went to the police and admitted staging the theft to make an insurance claim.

He pleaded guilty to public mischief.

Trustees Want the Power To Okay Non-Profit Pacts

Greater Victoria school board will write the provincial government asking that boards be allowed to undertake sharing agreements with non-profit societies.

At the same time it will tell Victoria Sports School Auxiliary that it cannot legally provide the auxiliary land on which to build a gymnasium.

The auxiliary wants the board to allow it to build a gymnasium on land next to Blanshard elementary school, in return for which the school could use the gym three hours each school day.

The board has shown support for the proposal, but has been advised by its lawyer that it can share capital and operating costs only by agreements with municipalities, not societies.

The auxiliary has also been seeking financial support of Victoria city council for construction of the $75,000 gym.

Trustee Walter Donald told the board Monday that a meeting with city officials has been arranged for July 24 to dicusss the gym proposal.

In other business, the board:

Agreed to establish a committee of teachers to study Outward Bound-type outdoors projects for the district.

—Decided to hire a career counsellor to work with schools and the community, helping students with work experience programs and choosing careers.

—Agreed to provide space in Willows elementary school for a parent-financed Montessori pre-school class.

TRUST OR FIRE

Greater Victoria school board employees will not have to disclose their financial holdings when the Public Officials Disclosure Act takes effect Sept. 15.

The school board decided unanimously Monday not to designate any employee "a municipal employee" under the act, thus exempting all from disclosure.

"We feel you either trust nobody or you trust everybody . . ." said board chairman Peter Bunn.

"The best thing to do is to trust your staff. If you don't trust them you fire them."

The act gives municipal councils and school boards power to designate certain positions held by senior employees as subject to the disclsoures act.

Trustees earlier this year voiced strong criticism of the disclosures act, and asked for amendements requiring anyone wanting to see the financial statements to show cause before a provincial court judge.

All trustees must make the disclosures, unless they announce them will not run again for office.

City in U.S. Survey

Greater Victoria School District is the only one in Canada chosen by an Oregon research team doing a 12-city survey of how responsive school districts are to the public.

The district was chosen because research showed "Victoria had a very high degree of (public) involvement in terms of parent choice," said Dr. John Jones of Eugene, Ore., one of the project directors.

Victoria parents have considerable freedom in deciding which school to send their child to, and also have the choice of several alternative schools in the district, he said.

The study, approved by the board Monday, is being conducted by the Centre for Educational Policy and Management of the University of Oregon and will take until 1976 to complete.

Other cities in the survey are Pasadena, Cal.; Atlanta, Ga.; Seattle, Wash.; Brooklyn, N.Y.; Eugene; and Victoria-Woorster, Mass. Negotiations in other cities are proceeding.

The Oregon researchers will recruit two local people to observe decision-making in the district by attending school board meetings and interviewing trustees and staff.

As well, a survey of people in the district will be made to determine their educational preferences.

HAIR SPRAY HIJACK WEAPON?

LONDON (Reuter) — Women passengers at London's Heathrow airport had their hair spray aerosol cans confiscated by security police Monday because it is believed the cans can be used as flamethrowers to hijack airplanes.

Airport police collected about 300 cans of hair spray and fly-killer in a surprise security exercise which also brought in troops and armored cars.

An official said it has been demonstrated that the cans can be as lethal as small bombs.

Canada In Space Program

OTTAWA (CP) — Expansion of government space policy, including possible participation in the United States shuttle program, was announced today by Science Minister Jeanne Sauve.

The main element of the policy redefinition is improvement of the capacity of Canadian industry to design and build domestic space systems, the minister said in a statement.

That would be achieved by switching research now done by government agencies over to industry, and by farming out new projects to industry.

Canadian space policy has been based largely on communications projects — the Anik satellites, for example.

It now is being expanded to include such projects as the U.S.-based Earth Resources Technology Satellite (ERTS), in which Canada already participates.

Mrs. Sauve said the National Research Council is discussing Canadian involvement in the space shuttle with the U.S. National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA).

The exact form any participation might take has not been settled, she said.

The shuttle is based on a reusable manned launch vehicle and servicing of satellites in orbit.

The government has authorized $1 million to finance studies of the project, but Canadian participation could cost $35 million, depending on the share the government takes, sources said.

NASA and the government also are jointly engaged in the five-year, $56-million development of the Communications Technology Satellite, to be launched in 1975.

Turk Intervention Threat for Cyprus

Times News Services

Turkey called on Britain today to join it in intervening in Cyprus and said it would go it alone if the U.K. refused to help.

Heavy fighting was reported in Nicosia again today.

Archbishop Makarios, ousted Cypriot president, is "sound and well" and was seen today by two senior United Nations representatives in the town of Paphos, a UN spokesman announced in New York.

Developments on the island indicate Turkey and Greece once again might be approaching a war over Cyprus as in 1954 and 1967.

In London, Foreign Secretary James Callaghan announced in the Commons today that Makarios has been allowed refuge in the sovereign British base area on the island.

Makarios later left Cyprus for an unknown destination. Some authorities speculate he may be heading for a special session of the United Nations Security Council.

Callaghan also said that Britain has urged the Greek government to recall Greek officers of the National Guard "at the earliest possible moment."

Under the 1960 treaty guaranteeing the independence of Cyprus, the guarantors — Britain, Greece and Turkey — can intervene jointly or unilaterally against any threat to the island's status quo.

The British government may have to decide in the next few hours whether to invoke Article IV of the Treaty of Guarantee and send in the army and the Royal Air Force against the Greek-led military junta.

The decision depends on whether Turkish Prime Minister Bulent Ecevit orders his armed forces into action under the treaty.

Turkey had put all her forces on full alert Monday night, with 61 naval vessels cruising between Greece and Cyprus, army units ready for embarkation as they were in the crisis of 1954 and 1967, and air squadrons only 25 minutes' flying time from the north coast of Cyprus.

Officials in Whitehall Monday night were ordered to say nothing about the contents of the "urgent messages" sent in the foreign secretary's name during the afternoon to the foreign ministers of Greece and Turkey.

Copies were also sent to UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim.

British political sources said it was virtually unthinkable that Britain should get militarily involved in Cyprus on top of her Ulster commitment.

Sources said Britain is anxious to avoid at all cost direct involvement in the crisis and is trying to cool the situation through intensified diplomatic pressure on the Greek and Turkish governments.

Makarios today appealed in a broadcast monitored in Tel Aviv to the superpowers, to all friendly countries and all peaceful people to support the Cypriot nation in its struggle for independence, its sovereignity, its democratic rights and its refusal to submit to the "Greek dictatorship."

Speaking in English, he made the appeal over the radio station at Paphos.

Callaghan also told the Commons:

"It appears that the National Guard are at present in control of parts of the island and that fighting continues among the Cypriot population, although the Turkish population is not at present involved."

Makarios, in his broadcast, said, however, loyalist forces were in control of Limassol, the nation's second largest city, where they "have taken charge of the situation and overcome the subversive forces of fascism."

"We will continue to fight against these people and are supported by our friends," Makarios said.

A British foreign office spokesman said Britain still recognizes Makarios as president of Cyprus.

The rebel-held Nicosia radio said today five cabinet ministers were sworn in today as part of a new government for the island.

12-FLOOR FALL THEN A DRINK

VANCOUVER (CP) — A window-cleaner fell 12 storeys Monday from an apartment building, bounced off a parked car, then recuperated with a drink in the apartment manager's suite.

Norm Lawrence, 23, was working on the top floor of the Del Charro Apartments, when a knot in the rope connecting his platform to a pulley came loose.

He hit the roof of a car parked near a door at the side of the building and bounced from there to the ground. His only injuries were a cut on the head and a sore ankle and Lawrence said he believes the sore ankle came in the fall from the roof of the car to the ground.

Eleanor Bolam, manager of the building, said she gave Lawrence a drink and refused to allow him to return to work until today.

"I wanted to go back to work, but she sent me home," Lawrence said. "I felt like a school kid."

As he fell, Lawrence said, he saw he was going to hit pavement and used his feet to push himself away from the side of the building. The parked car now has a dent about four feet long, three feet wide and seven or eight inches deep in the roof, he said.

One of his main concerns now is whether the Insurance Corporation of B.C. will pay for what he estimates as about $300 damage to the car.

"I really can't afford to pay for it myself. I'm just starting out in my business."

'Save Crystal' Lottery Sought

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

A city-run lottery to finance the restoration of the old Crystal Garden building was suggested today by Ald. Sam Bawlf.

He told city aldermen if Vancouver could use that means to try to save its Orpheum Theatre, Victoria could do the same for the Crystal.

By means of a lottery and perhaps a grant from the provincial government toward capital costs, Bawlf said he was "confident" the city could find enough to rejuvenate the building.

The city's public works committee didn't say yea or nay to the suggestion, but meanwhile it accepted Bawlf's suggestion that a special committee be struck to study the whole question of bringing back some shine to the Crystal's lacklustre dereliction.

The committee will be headed by Ald. Mike Young, with Bawlf, Ald. Alf Hood and Ald. Percy Frampton as members. Its first meeting was set for mid-August.

Bawlf said the need for action was prompted by the provincial government's indication that it has no interest in either the Crystal building or the site, despite earlier signs that the government was considering the development of a downtown transit centre there.

While capital costs were important, he said, of more "vital concern" was the question whether the new-style Crystal could be operated without placing a heavy burden on taxpayers.

Bawlf reiterated an earlier proposal that the upper promenade of the building could be an arboretum, while the lower areas could be given over to a variety of "recreationally-oriented commercial uses."

The arboretum, he said, might be operated by the Butchart's Gardens establishment in conjunction with their Central Saanich attraction.

Young agreed no time should be lost in studying the matter, as the Crystal is "an asset that's wasting."

Besides provincial interest in the Crystal in recent months, a few entrepreneurs have been studying commercial development prospects for the building. One of them is believed to be thinking in terms of a dolphin pool attraction.

PAIR ESCAPE SECOND TIME IN TWO DAYS

HOPE (CP) — Police with tracking dogs are searching for Cecil Logan and Gordon Campbell today following their second escape in two days from jail here.

An RCMP spokesman said the pair escaped at 5:30 a.m., using a hacksaw to cut through the bars of the bullpen and cut one of the cell-block windows.

On Monday, the pair were recaptured after an escape Sunday night. It took less than six hours to get them back into custody.

Campbell, 28, was charged with attempted murder after a man arrested on an attempted theft charge last week, shot at but missed an RCMP officer during the arrest.

Logan, 29, was in jail on a conspiracy charge.

Both have also been charged with escaping custody in connection with the Sunday breakout.

Nixon Aides Probed Taxes

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — The House of Representatives Judiciary Committee today released evidence that the White House sought to create tax problems for Democrats and favorable tax treatment for its friends.

In the process, according to a 440-page report, it looked into the confidential tax status of assorted politically active movie stars.

The report — which drew no final conclusions — was the latest installment to be released by the committee of evidence gathered in its closed-door impeachment inquiry.

The report also claimed that John D. Ehrlichman chewed out the chief of the Internal Revenue Service for a "crappy job" in 1972 when a White House-instigated audit failed to turn up any tax cheating by then-Democratic chairman Lawrence O'Brien.

"I wanted them to turn up something and send him (O'Brien) to jail before the election and unfortunately it didn't materialize," Ehrlichman was quoted as saying.

The report included affidavits from two former IRS directors who told the committee about pressures from White House aides to force the tax agency to obey their instructions.

The evidence also disclosed that John Caulfield, a former treasury department and White House aide, regularly obtained confidential IRS information from Vernon Acree, the assistnat commissioner for inspection for IRS.

An affidavit given the committee by Randolph Thrower, a former IRS director, on May 24, 1974, disclosed that Thrower had asked Acree in 1970 "to investigate the possibility of an unlawful disclosure of confidential tax information" to columnist Jack Anderson.

In a related development, former presidential aide Charles Colson told newsmen Monday after appearing for nine hours before the judiciary committee that he believed Nixon did not know "in advance" of the burglary at the office Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist.

Manitoba Drivers Hit Back

WINNIPEG (CP) — Motorists who are annoyed at the way other people drive in Manitoba now can do more than just mutter or curse.

The provincial government has hired four students for the summer to accept complaints, in writing or by telephone, about drivers.

However, only those complainants who are willing to have their names and addresses recorded will have their complaints registered.

The registered owner of a car that prompted the complaint will receive a letter, telling him a complaint has been filed.

Under the temporary program, acceptable complaints may be about incidents of illegal, unsafe or simply discourteous driving.

The letter will ask the owner to draw the matter to the attention of the person who was driving the car at the time.

Highways Minister Peter Burtniak said the recipient of the letter is welcome to discuss it with the Motor Vehicle Branch.

Burtniak, who announced the program Monday, indicated that no action would be taken beyond the letter or discussion stage.

'Better Use' For Posters

Liberal and Conservative candidate campaign signs were more useful as material for a car port than for their intended use, the accused told a provincial court judge Monday.

Allan Wilson, 41, of Duncan, explained in Duncan provincial court he took the elections signs during the recent campaign because "I was building a carport and thought they could be put to better use."

His actions had no political overtones, Wilson said.

Judge Lance Heard granted a conditional discharge after six months probation.

Two-Thirds IWA Back on Job

About two-thirds of the 32,000 coast woodworkers are back at work today, easing the province's largest industry back into full productivity.

Some 9,000 members of the International Woodworkers of America including 400 employees of a Victoria plywood mill — are still off the job, despite wishes of union officials who reached a tentative agreement with the forest industry last week.

Most workers are expected to return to their jobs later this week, but employees of the B.C. Forest Product's plywood division at Gorge Road have voted to stay off the job until the new contract results are known July 31.

Only maintenance staff returned to Sooke Forest Products today. They will be joined by production workers in five days, after equipment breakdowns experienced during the firm's last shift are righted.

A spokesman for the IWA local 1-118 in Victoria reported some 500 employees returned to B.C. Forest Products' sawmill division on Garbally Road today and the 250 employees moved into operation at Victoria Plywood at midnight Monday.

Employees at Butler Bros. at Sooke and Canada Puget Sound Co. workers at Jordan River returned to work at 8 a.m. today.

In Duncan 5,059 members of Local 1-80 voted to return to work Wednesday. Woodworkers agreed at a meeting Monday that it would be "sheer folly" for members to continue to lose wages pending the outcome of the settlement vote.

A union spokesman could not predict if the return-to-work would be hampered by members of a rank-and-file committee centred in Nanaimo that erected pickets Monday around all but one operation in the Duncan area.

"I can't predict what action will be taken, but they'll be responsible for taking wages out of the pockets of workers if they do. The responsibility rests entirely on the shoulders of the rank and file group."

IWA regional president Jack Munro visited the Duncan local Monday afternoon after reports of pickets and said the group has no authority, whatsoever, to speak for union members.

Dog-Overboard Finds Owner

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

The mystery of how a dog ended up fighting for her life in the middle of the Gulf of Georgia has been solved.

The dog — a friendly four-year-old German Shepherd — was rescued on the eve of the Victoria-Maui race when John Long's Sea Ray was on her way over from Vancouver for the start of the ocean classic.

The crew spotted her, picked her up, dried her out and took her to Cranston's Animal Hospital on Douglas.

After being treated for exposure, the dog was taken to the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals' shelter on Napier Lane.

How did she end up floundering in the sea in the vicinity of Point Grey?

The mystery was solved Monday afternoon.

A friend of her owner, who has one of her pups, claimed her.

Chris Maloney, like the rescued dog's owner, is a commercial fisherman.

He said her master, who has a cabin at Haney, was on the way out to sea again.

His boat was being pitched around in heavy seas.

He didn't notice his pet being washed over the side until it was too late.

Maloney has radioed the dog's owner, who is still at sea, and a joyful reunion with his pet is planned on his return to port.

Maloney recognized his friend's pet in a story and picture carried in Saturday's Times. He had put in with his boat at Sidney.

He got in touch with the SPCA.

For the last 10 days the SPCA had been trying to trace the dog's owner through their counterparts in Vancouver and Vancouver radio stations. Nobody came forward.

An SPCA official said, "It was sheer luck — or something — that brought Mr. Maloney into Sidney."
